City or Rural Life

Part 4 – Writing (40 marks)

Read this text (200 words):

Two Different Ways of Living

Some people believe the ideal life is in a busy city with endless work opportunities, cultural events, and public transport. They argue that cities push people to innovate and connect with diverse communities. Others claim a quiet rural life brings deeper well-being. They point to cleaner air, stronger family ties, and lower living costs. Both sides agree technology now allows people to work or study almost anywhere.

Task 4.1 (5 marks)

Summarize the two points of view presented in your own words.

Summary:

As far as I can analyse the text, I think it presents two lifestyles. One supports living in a busy city with many work opportunities, cultural events, and good transport. However, the other prefers quiet rural life, arguing it brings well-being through clean air, family ties, and lower costs.

Task 4.2 – Main Writing Prompt (35 marks)

Write an essay (minimum 220 words) comparing the two lifestyles. Show which lifestyle you prefer and why. Use comparing & contrasting expressions, express opinions, and support your view with reasons or examples.

Model Essay:

Nowadays, most people search for lifestyles that bring success and happiness. In many cases, this choice depends on whether they live in busy cities or quiet rural areas. This essay will explore the advantages of living in a city, the benefits of rural life, and finally present my personal viewpoint.

To begin with, living in a city usually offers a wide range of opportunities. In other words, there are many varied jobs, efficient public transport, and cultural events that can broaden our minds. On the one hand, both young professionals and students often benefit from this fast pace because they may develop their skills more quickly and meet people from different backgrounds. However, city life can also be stressful and expensive.

On the other hand, rural areas usually provide cleaner air, more space, and stronger family connections. For example, people often enjoy a slower lifestyle with less noise and lower costs, which can support good mental health. In addition, technology now allows many people to work remotely, so they do not always need to live near offices. Nevertheless, rural life might feel isolated and can limit access to specialised healthcare, universities, or entertainment.

Personally, I would prefer a balanced but mainly rural lifestyle. To exemplify, clean surroundings and close family ties can improve my mental health, and lower expenses. If I need city advantages, I can sometimes commute or connect online.

To put it in a nutshell, both city and rural life have pros and cons. While the former may offer opportunities and diversity, the latter often gives more peace and family stability. In my opinion, rural living with modern technology can provide a happier life.
