Reading Passage 1

Mariam is regarded as one of the most accomplished retailers in the region, having built a retail empire over many years and expanded into multiple markets. She studied fashion at university and acknowledges that her success is largely due to her keen awareness of local trends and product preferences. Unlike many in the industry, she does not rely on extensive investigative trips to renowned fashion hubs like Paris or Milan. Instead, her deep understanding of the local retail landscape, gained from over 30 years of experience, has contributed to her longevity and sustained success in the industry.

Mariam's leadership had an immediate impact due to her warm and approachable style, which fosters collaboration and effective communication. She prioritizes building strong relationships with her staff, whom she deeply relies on for the success of her business. When she first started, it was uncommon for a CEO to be so personable and down-to-earth, as many industry leaders were perceived as distant or elitist. Mariam's affectionate and engaging nature has been a key factor in her company's success, proving that genuine connections in the workplace can drive long-term growth and achievement.

Mariam attributes her success to these key elements. She actively listens to customers and attends conferences to stay informed about the latest trends. By prioritizing strong relationships with both staff and customers, she has ensured the long-term sustainability of her business—focusing on connections rather than just sales figures. She firmly believes that if her business were solely driven by profit, it would not have remained viable in the long run.

As Mariam moves forward, she appears to have carved a unique path for herself. However, an important question arises: can her approach be applied universally? While her leadership style aligns well with the values of a more empathetic and collaborative era, one might wonder whether such a method would be effective in highly competitive and cutthroat industries.

Multiple-Choice Questions

1. Mariam is well skilled at product choice due to ____.

- (A) the qualifications she gained at university
- (B) her length of experience in the sector
- (C) her research journeys in various countries

2. ____ managers have Mariam's attitudes towards her staff.

- (A) Very successful
- (B) A range of
- (C) Not many

3. ____ is considered to be one of Mariam's personality traits.

- (A) Independence
- (B) Snobbishness
- (C) Kindness

4. Which aspect of her business does Mariam NOT consider crucial to sustaining success?

- (A) The relationships with people
- (B) The ability to generate profits
- (C) The knowledge of the market

5. The last paragraph mostly ____.

- (A) Gives the author's opinion on Mariam's approach
- (B) Compares Mariam's success to other business people
- (C) Makes predictions about Mariam's future

6. The text draws a connection between ____.

- (A) Retail profits and university degrees
- (B) Mariam's attitude and her success
- (C) Employee knowledge and research opportunities

Passage: The Power of Teamwork and Growth

In a small town, a group of high school students formed a robotics team to compete in the national championships. The team consisted of individuals with different skill sets—some excelled at programming, while others were experts in mechanical design or marketing. Despite their diverse strengths, their biggest challenge was learning how to work together effectively.

At the start, competition within the team was fierce. Some members wanted to lead every decision, while others felt unheard. Frustration grew as conflicting ideas slowed their progress. However, when their first prototype malfunctioned during testing, they realized that collaboration was essential. Instead of blaming each other, they analyzed the issue together and combined their knowledge to find a solution.

As the competition neared, their teamwork improved. They respected each other's expertise, communicated more efficiently, and supported one another under pressure. On the day of the championship, their robot performed flawlessly, securing them a top position. More importantly, they had discovered the true power of teamwork—not just in competitions, but in life.

The experience taught them a valuable lesson: success is not about individual brilliance, but about the ability to work together, adapt, and grow. The students left the competition not only with a trophy but also with a deeper understanding of perseverance and collaboration—skills that would serve them well in the future.

1. The robotics team struggled initially because they:

- (A) lacked technical skills.
- (B) faced communication and leadership conflicts.
- (C) had insufficient funding.

2. What helped the team improve their collaboration?

- (A) Their robot malfunctioned, forcing them to work together.
- (B) A guest mentor taught them teamwork strategies.
- (C) They replaced team members who disagreed.

3. The mood after the team's first prototype failure was:

- (A) indifferent and unconcerned.
- (B) hopeless and defeated.
- (C) tense but ultimately constructive.

4. The passage suggests that true success comes from:

- (A) teamwork, adaptability, and perseverance.
- (B) financial investment in better technology.
- (C) individual talent and leadership.

5. The team's change in attitude can best be described as:

- (A) stubborn to collaborative.
- (B) confused to overconfident.
- (C) motivated to lazy.

6. The author likely wrote this passage to:

- (A) argue that robotics competitions are too difficult.
- (B) emphasize the importance of teamwork in success.
- (C) warn against competition among students.

7. The passage draws a connection between:

- (A) robotics and career choices.
- (B) teamwork in competitions and success in real life.
- (C) competition and selfishness.

8. If the team had not learned to collaborate, they most likely would have:

- (A) succeeded despite their conflicts.
- (B) lost the competition and remained divided.
- (C) quit the competition altogether.

Passage: Passage: The Role of Innovation in Sustainable Business

In today's rapidly evolving world, businesses must continuously adapt to stay competitive. One of the most important factors in long-term success is innovation, particularly when it is aligned with sustainability. Companies that integrate eco-friendly solutions into their operations not only reduce their environmental impact but also attract a growing number of environmentally conscious consumers.

Take, for example, a small startup that developed biodegradable packaging as an alternative to plastic. Initially, the company faced difficulties convincing businesses to switch to its product. However, as governments began implementing stricter environmental regulations, demand for sustainable materials increased. The startup's ability to innovate early positioned it as a leader in the industry.

Another successful example is a global clothing brand that adopted a recycling program, encouraging customers to return old garments in exchange for store discounts. This strategy not only reduced waste but also strengthened customer loyalty. By focusing on sustainable innovation, the company demonstrated that profitability and environmental responsibility can coexist.

Experts argue that businesses that resist change risk being left behind. While some companies hesitate due to high initial costs, many have found that investing in green technology leads to long-term savings and stronger brand reputation. Innovation in sustainability is no longer just an option—it is becoming a necessity for businesses that want to thrive in the future.

1. Why did the biodegradable packaging startup struggle at first?

- (A) It had difficulty convincing businesses to use its product.
- (B) Consumers were not interested in new products.
- (C) The government banned its materials.

1. How did the clothing brand's recycling program benefit the company?

- (A) It raised clothing prices.
- (B) It helped strengthen customer loyalty.
- (C) It increased waste production.

2. What is a key message of the passage?

- (A) Innovation in sustainability is crucial for long-term success.
- (B) Businesses should avoid innovation to minimize risks.
- (C) Startups cannot compete with large companies.

3. The clothing company's approach to sustainability demonstrates that:

- (A) Companies can be both profitable and eco-friendly.
- (B) Businesses must choose between profits and the environment.
- (C) Recycling programs are always costly and ineffective.

4. What is one reason some companies hesitate to innovate sustainably?

- (A) Consumer disinterest.
- (B) High initial costs.
- (C) Lack of government support.

5. The passage suggests that companies that resist sustainable innovation will:

- (A) Have lower costs in the long run.
- (B) Risk falling behind in the market.
- (C) Gain an advantage over competitors.

7. The passage draws a connection between:

- (A) Sustainability and business success.
- (B) Government policies and business failures.
- (C) Employee training and environmental impact.

Reading Passage 2

The Johnson family has been active in the distribution sector for over 50 years. Their business, Johnson Distributors, is widely recognized as one of the most successful in the industry. While the company has encountered difficult periods in the past, their unwavering hard work and determination have been key to their resilience and continued prosperity.

At one point, the Johnson family had to adapt to new administrative regulations. Although they were confident in their ability to handle the changes, they approached the situation as a major challenge. Working together as a cohesive unit, they streamlined their decision-making process, which significantly improved their operations. To remain competitive, they modified the components of their products and adjusted their pricing strategies to keep them affordable. Without their innovative mindset, the business would have suffered considerable revenue losses. However, their strategic changes ultimately led to a remarkable turnaround.

Succession planning is often a major challenge for family businesses, requiring careful consideration of leadership transitions. Unlike many others, the Johnson family has a well-structured plan in place to ensure a seamless transfer of ownership when the current leader steps down. The primary obstacle they face is the extensive paperwork required by national regulations. Despite seeking external assistance, these administrative hurdles remain unresolved.

Looking ahead, the Johnson family's distribution business appears poised for continued success. Their ability to adapt and evolve in a constantly changing industry sets them apart. Unlike traditional family businesses that adhere to outdated practices, the Johnsons embrace innovation. They have integrated advanced technologies and optimized their distribution networks, making it more convenient for customers to access their products. These strategic advancements have positioned them as a global leader in their field.

Multiple-Choice Questions

1. It is impossible to ignore the Johnsons' ____.

- (A) failures in distribution
- (B) high level of effort
- (C) troubles with finances

2. The Johnsons' decision-making process was improved because they ____.

- (A) treated the new situation very seriously
- (B) took a relaxed approach to the new changes
- (C) each did their own planning independently

3. The reason the business didn't lose money was their ____.

- (A) high prices they could charge
- (B) keeping the same parts
- (C) original and creative approach

4. The main problem the Johnson business is having is ____.

- (A) choosing a successor to take over the family business
- (B) not finding a solution to some paperwork
- (C) the unexpected retirement of a key family member

5. The succession plan and the product changes show that the Johnson business ____.

- (A) doesn't have problems with new rules from outside the company
- (B) has difficulty when making changes to their business
- (C) is good at managing its internal decisions

6. The last paragraph mostly ____.

- (A) compares the Johnsons to other family businesses
- (B) predicts the future of the Johnson business
- (C) disagrees with the Johnsons' approach

Reading Passage 3

Sami owned a restaurant and ran it with his two children, Joe and Amy. He was always proud of his children and how they supported the restaurant. Business was such a success that they expanded into a new restaurant on the other side of the city. Sami now had to decide who would become the manager of the new restaurant.

Amy immediately started to show that she had the skills for this. She changed the menu, and got many positive reviews about the new items on there. She even started researching how she might buy some of the ingredients cheaper to change prices. Meanwhile, Joe acted as if he were already the CEO of the new restaurant, and he even behaved in this way around customers. Soon, the complaints started reaching Sami and helped make his mind up.

When it came to the big decision day, Sami gathered his children and explained that he was pleased with the plan Amy had made and that she should manage the new restaurant. If Joe weren't so arrogant, he would have been proud of Amy. Instead, they started a big quarrel. Once Amy and Joe's conflict settled, there was an uncomfortable silence as no one knew what to say to each other. After what felt like forever, Sami finally broke the silence. He told them that he would be proud of both his children, no matter who he had chosen to run the restaurant.

Later that month, Joe went to visit Amy in her new restaurant. As he arrived, he couldn't believe what a nice part of the city it was in. He sat down and ordered, and it pained him to admit the lobster sandwiches were delicious. "I think this place will be a success," said Amy.

"Only if you change the decoration, will it," Joe stated back, keeping his same attitude towards Amy.

Multiple-Choice Questions

1. The customers didn't like ____.

- (A) Joe's attitude
- (B) the new menu
- (C) the price changes

2. Joe's ____ meant he couldn't be proud of Amy.

- (A) plan that he made
- (B) view of himself
- (C) opinion of the customers

3. The mood after Amy and Joe's talk was ____.

- (A) relaxed
- (B) awkward
- (C) excited

4. Both before and after the big decision on the new restaurant, Sami ____.

- (A) didn't feel proud of Joe
- (B) always preferred Joe to Amy
- (C) thought equally of his two children

5. Joe immediately made a negative comment about the ____.

- (A) decoration
- (B) sandwiches
- (C) location

6. Another good title for the story would be ____.

- (A) Brother's Support for Sister
- (B) The Menu Quarrel
- (C) Family Business Troubles

7. Through the story, Joe ____ most of what Amy suggests.

- (A) agrees with
- (B) argues with
- (C) ignores

8. Joe will most likely ____.

- (A) continue to cause some trouble for Amy
- (B) always support Amy fully in her restaurant
- (C) keep working on the menu changes

Effective Communication in Family Relationships, defined as the ability to openly express thoughts, emotions, and concerns while listening to others with understanding, has recently emerged as a pivotal subject. This essay will discuss how effective communication impacts family relationships, shedding light on three main ideas. Not only will it delve into the importance of open and honest communication, but it will also discuss the challenges in family communication and strategies for improving communication.

First and foremost, open and honest communication is essential for building trust and understanding among family members. That means, if family members express their thoughts and feelings freely, they develop stronger emotional bonds. Moreover, healthy communication reduces misunderstandings and strengthens relationships. For example, according to the most updated data, families that engage in regular conversations report a 60% increase in relationship satisfaction. That is why open communication is the foundation of strong family connections. The coming paragraph will discuss challenges in family communication.

Secondly, several obstacles can hinder effective communication within families. In other words, technology distractions, generational gaps, and unresolved conflicts can create emotional distance unless families actively address these issues. Additionally, the more families struggle with communication barriers, the more misunderstandings and conflicts arise. For instance, recent studies have concluded that excessive screen time among family members reduces face-to-face interactions and weakens emotional bonds. That is why understanding and addressing communication barriers is crucial. The coming paragraph will discuss strategies for improving communication.

Thirdly, there are several ways families can enhance communication and strengthen their relationships. That means, as long as families prioritize active listening, set aside quality time, and practice empathy, they can improve their communication skills. Furthermore, establishing family traditions, such as weekly discussions, fosters deeper connections. For example, based on the most updated data, families that schedule dedicated time for communication experience fewer conflicts and higher emotional well-being. That is why practicing effective communication strategies leads to healthier family dynamics.

To sum up, effective communication in family relationships is believed to be a controversial and debatable issue. This essay discussed the importance of open communication, the challenges families face, and strategies to improve communication. Finally, I believe it is the role of parents and educators to promote healthy communication habits within families to strengthen relationships and emotional well-being.

Conclusion:

- Restate the main topic as well as the three main ideas.
- Add a suggestion or an opinion.

Competition and Cooperation in Achieving Success, defined as two essential approaches that influence individual and group achievements, have recently emerged as a pivotal subject. This essay will discuss how both competition and cooperation contribute to success, shedding light on three main ideas. Not only will it delve into the role of competition in growth, but it will also discuss the importance of cooperation in teamwork and the balance between both for long-term success.

First and foremost, competition plays a vital role in personal and professional growth by encouraging individuals to improve and strive for excellence. That means, if people compete against one another in academic, professional, or sports settings, they are likely to push their limits and enhance their skills. Moreover, competition fosters motivation and innovation, leading to significant advancements in different fields. For example, according to the most updated data, companies that encourage competition among employees experience a 30% increase in productivity. That is why competition is essential for continuous self-improvement. The coming paragraph will discuss the importance of cooperation in teamwork.

Secondly, cooperation is crucial for teamwork and achieving collective goals. In other words, without collaboration, individuals may struggle to combine their strengths, which can limit success unless they develop teamwork skills. Additionally, the more people work together, the more innovative and effective their solutions become. For instance, recent studies have concluded that businesses with strong teamwork cultures are 25% more successful than those that prioritize individual competition. That is why cooperation is essential for group success. The coming paragraph will discuss how to balance both competition and cooperation for optimal results.

Thirdly, finding the right balance between competition and cooperation leads to the best outcomes. That means, as long as individuals and organizations know when to compete and when to collaborate, they can maximize their potential. Furthermore, a balanced approach ensures both personal excellence and teamwork efficiency. For example, based on the most updated data, companies that integrate both competition and teamwork report higher innovation rates and employee satisfaction. That is why balancing both elements is key to sustainable success.

To sum up, competition and cooperation are believed to be crucial yet debatable factors in success. This essay discussed how competition fosters growth, the significance of cooperation in teamwork, and the importance of balancing both approaches. Finally, I believe it is the role of educators and leaders to encourage a healthy mix of competition and collaboration for long-term achievements.
