Writing Mock Exam – Living in a large city and in the countryside – 12 ADV

1.1 Read the text. What is the writer's opinion about multitasking? Do you agree with their point of view? Explain in your own words. Write at least 4–5 sentences.

Living in a city and living in the countryside offer very different lifestyles, each with its own advantages and challenges.

City life is often exciting and full of opportunities. People can find better jobs, schools, hospitals, and entertainment. Public transport makes it easy to get around, and there is always something happening — from concerts to new restaurants. However, city life can also be stressful. Traffic, noise, pollution, and the fast pace of life sometimes make people feel tired and disconnected from nature.

The countryside, on the other hand, provides peace, fresh air, and beautiful landscapes. People living in rural areas often enjoy a slower rhythm and closer relationships with their neighbours. It's a great place for those who value quiet and space. Yet, it can be difficult to find good jobs, modern facilities, or quick access to services.

Both city and countryside life have their strengths. The best choice depends on what someone values most — excitement and convenience, or calmness and simplicity.

Task 1

The text presents two different points of view about life in the city and life in the countryside. City life is described as exciting and full of opportunities, with access to jobs, education, and entertainment, but it can also be stressful because of traffic, noise, and pollution. People living in cities often enjoy convenience but may miss peace and nature.

In contrast, countryside life is peaceful and healthy, with fresh air and strong community ties. However, it may lack modern facilities and job opportunities. Both lifestyles have benefits and drawbacks, and the best choice depends on a person's needs and values.

Living in a large city with life in the countryside showing offer unique advantages and challenges that match everyone's lifestyle. In this essay, I will compare and contrast between both ways of life.

Living in a city provides many opportunities for education, work, and entertainment. Everything seems close and convenient — people can travel easily, meet new friends, and enjoy a lively social life. However, city life is often noisy and stressful. The fast pace, heavy traffic, and pollution can make people feel tired or overwhelmed. Some residents also find it difficult to relax or spend time in nature because they are constantly busy.

On the other hand, living in the countryside offers peace, space, and a strong sense of community. People there enjoy quiet surroundings, clean air, and closer relationships with neighbours. Life moves more slowly, which can reduce stress and improve mental well-being. Still, it can be challenging to find good jobs or quick access to healthcare and schools, which are usually available in cities.

Personally, I would prefer to live in the countryside. Although city life is exciting, I value peace and nature more. I like the idea of waking up to fresh air, seeing green fields, and having time to think without the rush of traffic or crowds. As the text suggests, while cities bring convenience, the countryside offers balance and simplicity — qualities that I find essential for a happy life
