Gr. 12 Term 01 2016-2017

Part 1

I'll never forget the first time I got a henna tattoo. It was my aunt's wedding. It was such a lovely day and I was so pleased with the final pattern. I was 14 and we all had henna done for the day. Henna is often used for weddings and has a very long history. Many different countries have used it, and it has been used to decorate hands and arms for thousands of years.

For the wedding, we had a henna tent where all the women went to have their hands painted. When we entered the tent, the henna paste was being prepared – someone was crushing the leaves and mixing them with hot water. Because my aunt was the bride, I knew that they would spend about an hour on hers and she would have the most beautiful paintings. We were next after my aunt, and the time it took to paint our hands was a lot quicker. When they had finished painting the patterns on, they sprayed them with a mixture of sugar and lemon juice.

The patterns on my hands were very intricate and beautiful. They looked like a pattern of flowers. I showed my grandmother and she told me a bit about the history of henna. She said in the old days people put it on their hands and feet to stay cool but when they noticed the stains it left, they started painting themselves with it. My great grandmother also told me about an old tradition – that the bride didn't need to do any housework while the stains from the henna were still on. I never found out if that was true for my great grandmother!

Although it was my first time to get a henna tattoo, I've had many more since then. We usually put henna on at any special occasion like weddings, birthdays or national celebrations. Whenever I get it done, I feel that I am really enjoying part of my heritage and our traditions. Today we share our customs with people around the world and I'm glad that henna has also become popular in those countries too.

Text one

If you ever want to experience a beautiful country, you should go to Sri Lanka. The capital city, Colombo, is where you can find top class hotels with food and accommodation which is second to none. No town in Sri Lanka can beat the luxury of Colombo's best hotels. In Southern Sri Lanka, you will find old forts made by the British and Dutch in the 1700s. Galle Fort, in the South, is one of the most beautiful and well-maintained examples of architecture and planning in the world. And if you like humidity and spicy food, Sri Lanka has them in plenty.

Tourists and locals alike can visit the elephant farms where elephants are looked after because they have lost their parents, are too old or sick, or their owners can't look after them any longer. Sigiriya Rock is an amazing example of ancient life preserved by the Sri Lankan government so that future generations can appreciate the beauty and history of Sri Lanka's colourful past. Let's also not forget the people, who are some of the warmest and most generous in the world.

Text two

I wanted to tell you about two holidays which I think are the best holidays I ever had. I loved them both equally so I can't decide which one I like most. When I was seven years old my parents took me to Disneyland Paris. They didn't tell my sister and I we were going until the night before and I remember we couldn't sleep. I think that was certainly part of the excitement I felt about the trip. It was only a forty-five-minute flight from London. We spent three days there, overall. We went on every ride possible and in the evening we danced with our favourite Disney characters. I remember being really, really happy.

The second holiday was a snowboarding holiday to France; so it was very different from the first holiday. It was the first time snowboarding for me but my father is a fantastic snowboarder. He took me up to the top of a small hill and strapped a snowboard to my feet and guided me down the hill about five times before he let me go on my own. I fell down a lot on that first trip but now I am very good at it. It's also a very cool thing to do as a teenager and all my friends did it too. I learned a skill on that holiday I can still use today. So that is why it is such a happy memory for me.
