Ramadan is the holiest time of the year in the Islamic religion. It is observed by more than one billion Muslims around the world. Ramadan is the ninth month of the Islamic lunar calendar. It begins when there is a new moon. During the month of Ramadan, Muslims do not eat or drink during daylight hours. The purpose of fasting is to teach self-control, to be reminded of people who suffer, and to concentrate completely on being a good person and people who are sick are not expected to fast during Ramadan. In addition to fasting during Ramadan, many Muslims try to do good deeds and to give up bad habits. They also try to strengthen their religious beliefs by going to mosques and studying the Quran.

During Ramadan people have 2 meals each day. One meal, called "Suhoor", happens before the sun rises. The other meal, called the "Iftar", is after sunset. The Iftar often begins with eating dates. Traditionally, dates are known as the food Muhammad ate when he broke his fast.
