“Modern Polar Expeditions”

Exploring in the past was completely different from exploring today. Hundreds of years ago, travelers didn't use to have any satellite maps or global positioning systems, so they had to draw charts manually by hand. Today, modern explorers organize well-prepared expeditions to the coldest parts of the world, such as the Arctic Circle and Antarctica.

A famous British leader named Felicity Aston led a large team of women on a major polar project. In 2012, she became the first solo explorer to ski entirely alone across the freezing continent of Antarctica. Before modern adventurers set off on these freezing journeys, they must put on multiple layers of highly specialized clothing to stay warm in the extreme cold. They also set up advanced base camps on the snow to sleep safely. This gear is very heavy, but it protects them from freezing temperatures and high polar winds. Reaching these goals requires immense preparation and bravery.

1. How did early explorers create world maps in the past?
 - a. They used high-tech digital satellites.
 - b. They drew charts manually by hand.
 - c. They downloaded records from the internet.
2. What significant record did Felicity Aston achieve in 2012?
 - a. She skied entirely alone across Antarctica.
 - b. She traveled around the world on the Equator.
 - c. She built the largest research station in Italy.
3. What must modern adventurers do before they set off on cold expeditions?
 - a. They must build a wooden sailing ship.
 - b. They must put on specialized warm clothing layers.
 - c. They must dive deep under the ocean surface.
4. Why do explorers set up temporary base camps on the snow?
 - a. To buy fresh food and spices from local markets.
 - b. To paint pictures of the ocean view.
 - c. To sleep and rest safely from freezing winds.
5. Which phrasal verb in the text means to begin a journey?
 - a. Set off.
 - b. Put on.
 - c. Set up.

“The Great Amazon Adventure”

On September 21st, 2025, Khalid arrived in Manaus, Brazil, to begin a thrilling journey into the deep Amazon rainforest. He joined an expert local team, and they planned to live inside the tropical jungle for two weeks.

First, they loaded their gear into small wooden canoes and set off down a wide river. After paddling for several hours, they had to stop because they encountered a giant waterfall. Suddenly, a loud jaguar roar sounded very close to them! Didn't Khalid feel terrified at that moment? Yes, he quickly put on his jacket and peeked outside. He saw a beautiful jaguar near their food boxes, but the animal walked away quietly into the bushes.

a. He became more adventurous and handled challenges bravely.

- b. He regretted going on the trip and wanted to return home.
- c. He disliked looking at the wild animals in the jungle.

Part 4: Writing

[40 marks total]

Constructed Writing Response: Write an expository text about an interesting expedition you would like to take (such as exploring a deep jungle, a hot desert, or a high mountain). Write at least 80 words. Include the following three prompts in your narrative:

1. Explain where you want to go, what you want to discover there, and what gear you need to pack.
2. Describe the steps of your journey.
3. Challenge a classmate's assumptions about whether exploring is easy or dangerous.

I want to take an exciting expedition to the Amazon rainforest in Brazil. I want to travel there to discover new plants and wild animals. I need to pack essential gear like a thick cloth tent, heavy boots, and a flashlight. First, my group will set off on a wooden boat down a large river. Next, we will climb up a steep mountain to look at the beautiful view. Finally, we will set up our base camp under the tall trees. I used to think that exploring a jungle was easy but it is actually very dangerous because of poisonous snakes.

Don't forget to review your answers & good luck!
