Part 4: Inference and Justification (5 marks)

Read the text below and answer the two questions in full sentences.

When I was a child, weekends were always the same. My family would wake up early on Saturday and walk to the farmer's market. My grandmother, who always brought her canvas shopping bags, taught me how to choose fresh vegetables. We never used plastic, which was something she believed was harming the planet. After shopping, we would go to the park where my grandfather planted trees every year with the local community. He used to say that trees were a gift for future generations.

Now that I'm older, I understand the value of those traditions. I still go to the market, and I never forget my reusable bags. But the park has changed. Many of the trees were cut down to build a parking lot. My grandfather would have been disappointed. The community tried to stop the development, but their voices weren't strong enough.

T3-2024-2025-G9-General -Revision

Still, I try to do my part. Last year, I joined a group that plants trees around the city. We have planted over 500 so far. It doesn't feel the same as when I was a child, but I hope that one day, a young boy or girl will remember planting trees with their family the same way I do.

Questions:

1. Why was the author's grandfather disappointed with the changes in the park?

---

---

2. How does the author try to continue their family's environmental tradition? Give reasons from the text.

"A Day at the Community Center"

Last Saturday, the community center hosted a fun and educational event. Families were invited to join workshops, games, and environmental activities. The day started with a cultural dance performance, followed by a storytelling session where local elders shared memories from their childhood.

In the afternoon, children attended a "Young Writers" workshop, where they learned how to write short stories using photos from the past. There was also a science lab for teenagers to explore sustainable energy. One of the most popular events was the smoothie bike—a bicycle that powered a blender to make healthy drinks!

Outside the building, volunteers planted flowers and herbs in the community garden. Meanwhile, the environmental club painted signs to remind people not to litter. Later in the day, families joined a recycling race, learning how to separate waste.

The event ended with a photo exhibition showing old pictures of the neighborhood. Many people said the day made them feel proud of their local history and excited about protecting the environment.

Part 8: Reading

"My Grandfather's Camera"

When I was young, I loved visiting my grandfather. He had a camera that looked very old. It was not digital like the ones we use today. It had a metal body and used rolls of film that had to be developed in a special room. He would take photos of nature: trees, birds, rivers.

He taught me how to hold the camera steady and look carefully before taking a photo. He said that each photo was important because film was expensive. We only had 36 photos on one roll, so we didn't waste a single picture.

Now, I use my phone to take hundreds of pictures. I can delete the ones I don't like. But something feels different. Taking pictures with my phone doesn't feel as special. I still keep the photos my grandfather took in an album. They remind me that photos are not just pictures—they are memories.

Questions:

- 1.What kind of camera did the grandfather use?
  - a) A phone camera
  - b) A film camera
  - c) A digital camera
- 2.Why were the photos important to the grandfather?
  - a) He wanted to become famous
  - b) Film was limited and expensive
  - c) He took pictures for school
- 3.What does the narrator feel about phone photos?

  - c) They are easier to print

Reading Text (for Parts 9–10)

A Volunteer Holiday That Changed My Life

Last summer, I signed up for something different: a volunteer tour to help areas affected by natural disasters. The event was organised by a local aid group that offered people the chance to travel, support communities, and enjoy a bit of adventure too.

We started in a small village where a serious storm had damaged many homes. Although the situation was difficult, the people were warm and welcoming. We helped to rebuild houses, cleaned public areas, and supported children's activities. It wasn't always comfortable—we stayed in basic tents and had to walk long distances—but the experience was fantastic.

After five days of aid work, we had a celebration with the local community. There was music, dancing, and a small festival with traditional food. It felt great to relax and enjoy the view of the nearby mountains. I even got a chance to dive in a clear, cold lake—something I'll never forget!

Later, we travelled to another town where a fire had destroyed forests. The local tour guide told us about the climate and how rising temperatures had made the area more at risk. I learned how important fuel management is in preventing disasters.

At the end of the trip, we visited a famous city known for eco-tourism. There were no plastic bottles or cars allowed. Everything was clean and peaceful. It made me think about how tourism can be used to help the environment, not hurt it.

This trip changed how I see travel. Now, I want every holiday I take to support people and the planet.

Part 3: Writing Task – Extended Response (25 marks)

Essay:

In the past, people spent their free time engaging in traditional hobbies like gardening and woodworking, which connected them to nature and their communities. Nowadays, technology-driven activities such as gaming and social media dominate leisure time, offering instant gratification but often isolating individuals. While modern activities cater to convenience, preserving traditional hobbies is crucial for cultural heritage and community bonds. They teach valuable skills and foster intergenerational connections, contributing to mental well-being and sustainable living.

---

---

Part 4: Inference and Justification

Reading Text:

Earthquakes, floods, hurricanes, and wildfires are natural disasters that strike with little warning. Although we cannot stop them, we can reduce their impact. Early warning systems, strong building codes, and evacuation plans save lives. Public education also helps people respond quickly and effectively.

For example, Japan has frequent earthquakes but experiences fewer casualties because of its strict building rules and regular drills. In contrast, countries without preparation suffer greater damage. Disaster preparation is not only the job of governments. Families should also have emergency kits, know safe places, and understand what to do in different situations.

Natural disasters remind us that human power has limits. However, preparation and smart planning can turn a dangerous event into a manageable one.

Inference Question:

T3-2024-2025-G9-General -Revision

Does the author believe that preparation can reduce the effects of natural disasters?

- How travel increases cultural awareness
- The benefits of meeting different people and seeing new places
- How travel changes our attitudes and helps us grow

(Write at least 200 words in paragraphs.)

Part 4: Inference and Justification

Reading Text:

Travel is not just about visiting places; it is about discovering new ways of thinking. When people travel, they are exposed to different languages, traditions, and lifestyles. This experience helps them understand others better and become more open-minded. Travelers often return with new ideas, greater tolerance, and a deeper appreciation for diversity.

For example, someone who travels to rural Africa may see the value of community, while a trip to Japan may teach the importance of respect and discipline. These lessons are not found in books or online—they are lived through real experiences.

Moreover, travel can break stereotypes. It challenges what people think they know and replaces fear with understanding. In a world with so much conflict, travel builds bridges between cultures.

Inference Question:

T3-2024-2025-G9-General -Revision

Does the author believe that travel leads to personal and cultural growth?

(Write at least 120 words in paragraphs.)

Part 4: Inference and Justification

Reading Text:

Free time is when people are not working or studying. It is their choice how to use it, and this choice often reflects their true interests. Some people use free time to learn new skills, such as playing an instrument or studying a language. Others spend time with family, volunteer in their community, or simply relax with a book or movie.

These choices show what people value. A person who spends free time helping others may value kindness, while someone who paints or writes may be creative and reflective. Free time activities also affect well-being. Doing what we enjoy helps us feel satisfied and reduces stress.

Unlike work or school, which have rules and goals, free time is about personal freedom. That is why it can reveal a lot about someone's character.

Inference Question:

Does the author believe that how we use our free time reflects our values and personality?

Justification Question:

Why is your answer to the inference question the best answer? Use evidence from the text.

- Body 2: Preparation includes warning systems, education, and emergency supplies.

T3-2024-2025-G9-General -Revision

- Body 3: Governments can create laws, and families can make safety plans.
- Conclusion: Preparation is key to surviving nature's power.

Part 3: Essay – Model Answer

Natural disasters, such as earthquakes, floods, and hurricanes, are uncontrollable events that can cause great destruction. Although we cannot stop nature, we can reduce its impact by preparing wisely.

These disasters often happen suddenly and can destroy homes, injure people, or even cause death. This is why preparation is so important.

Governments can install early warning systems to alert people before disasters occur. Building codes should be enforced so that homes and offices are strong enough to survive earthquakes or storms.

In addition, families must have emergency kits with food, water, and first aid supplies. Schools and communities should run drills to teach people how to react. Education saves lives. Japan is a great example of a country that takes preparation seriously, and as a result, fewer people are harmed during earthquakes.

In conclusion, we may not be able to stop natural disasters, but we can be ready. Through planning and education, we can reduce damage and protect lives.

Part 2: Plan – Model Answer

- Body 3: Travel teaches tolerance and breaks stereotypes.
- Conclusion: Travel makes people wiser and more understanding.

Part 3: Essay – Model Answer

Travel is one of the most powerful ways to learn and grow. It opens the mind by allowing people to experience new cultures, languages, and lifestyles. It also opens the heart by helping us understand and respect differences.

When we travel, we see the world from new angles. A visit to another country shows us how people live, eat, and solve problems differently. This experience teaches us to be more open-mindful and accepting. For example, visiting a traditional village can show the importance of community, while traveling to a busy city can highlight innovation and progress.

Travel also challenges stereotypes. What we thought we knew about other cultures often changes after we visit and speak to locals. We learn that people are more similar than different. These experiences help reduce fear and build global friendships.

In conclusion, travel helps us become better people. It teaches us about the world and ourselves. Through

Part 4: Inference & Justification – Model Answers

Inference Answer:

Yes, the author believes that preparation can reduce the effects of natural disasters.

Justification Answer:

The text clearly states that preparation, such as early warning systems and building rules, saves lives. The example of Japan shows that fewer people die when a country is well-prepared. The author also writes that “preparation and smart planning can turn a dangerous event into a manageable one,” which supports this idea.

Key Points to Remember:

- Subject-verb agreement: In the simple present, the verb changes form (usually by adding -s or -es) when the subject is he, she, or it.
- Irregular verbs: These verbs have unique past simple and past participle forms that must be memorized (e.g., go-went-gone, see-saw-seen).
- Contractions: In informal contexts, negative forms are often contracted (e.g., don't, doesn't, didn't, isn't, aren't, haven't, hasn't).

T3-2024-2025-G9-General -Revision

- "To be" as a main verb: "To be" can also function as a main verb, not just an auxiliary verb (e.g., "I am happy," "She was tired").
- Progressive tenses and stative verbs: Stative verbs (verbs that describe states, not actions, such as "know," "believe," "like") are generally not used in progressive tenses.
