Sharing things

Many students regard bike sharing and car sharing as practical and innovative solutions that address both financial and environmental concerns. These systems are appreciated for the flexibility they provide, allowing students to access transportation when necessary without the burdens of ownership, such as maintenance, insurance, or parking expenses. Bike sharing, in particular, is often highlighted as a healthy and sustainable option for short-distance travel, while car sharing is considered advantageous for longer journeys, group activities, or situations requiring greater convenience. Nonetheless, some students have expressed reservations, noting issues such as limited availability during peak hours, inconsistent vehicle maintenance, and the possibility that frequent use may lead to higher overall costs compared to owning a personal vehicle. Despite these challenges, the majority of students view sharing systems as an important step toward sustainable living, as they promote independence, reduce financial strain, and contribute to lowering traffic congestion and environmental pollution.

1. What is the main reason students choose bike sharing or car sharing?

- a) To save money on owning a vehicle
- b) To support an eco-friendly lifestyle
- c) For convenience and flexibility
- d) To avoid parking and maintenance problems

2. When do students prefer using bike sharing?

- a) For short trips around campus or the city
- b) For long-distance travel
- c) When traveling with friends
- d) For shopping or carrying heavy items

3. In what situations is car sharing more useful than bike sharing?

- a) For long journeys
- b) For group activities or trips with friends
- c) For carrying shopping or heavy loads
- d) All of the above

4. What challenges do students often face with shared transportation systems?

- a) Limited availability during busy hours
- b) Poor maintenance of bikes or cars
- c) Higher costs if used frequently
- d) All of the above

5. Overall, how do most students view bike sharing and car sharing?

- a) As a practical and sustainable alternative
- b) As too unreliable to be useful
- c) As more expensive than owning a vehicle
- d) As something they rarely think about

How to be successful in collage!

To be successful in college, students should focus on building strong study habits, managing their time effectively, and staying motivated throughout their studies. One of the most important steps is to attend classes regularly and pay close attention, since missing lessons often leads to confusion later on. Taking clear notes and reviewing them often helps students understand and remember what they have learned. Creating a study schedule and setting realistic goals can also make it easier to stay organized and avoid procrastination, which is a common challenge for many students. Success in college also comes from being active in learning: asking questions, participating in discussions, and working with classmates in group projects can deepen understanding and build confidence. It is equally important to take care of personal well-being by getting enough rest, eating healthy foods, exercising, and managing stress in positive ways. Balancing schoolwork with self-care makes it easier to stay focused and productive. Overall, with dedication, discipline, and a positive attitude, students can overcome challenges and achieve success in college, while also preparing themselves for future careers and opportunities.

1. What is one of the most important steps to being successful in college?

- a) Skipping classes when tired
- b) Attending classes regularly and paying attention
- c) Studying only before exams
- d) Copying homework from classmates

2. Why is it helpful to take clear notes and review them often?

- a) It makes the teacher happy
- b) It helps students understand and remember the material
- c) It saves time so students don't have to study
- d) It replaces reading textbooks

3. How can creating a study schedule and setting goals help students?

- a) By avoiding procrastination and staying organized
- b) By making schoolwork more difficult
- c) By giving them more free time to play games
- d) By allowing them to skip assignments

4. What is one way students can take an active role in their learning?

- a) Avoiding group projects
- b) Staying quiet during discussions
- c) Asking questions and participating in class
- d) Memorizing everything without understanding

5. Why is self-care important for success in college?

- a) It gives students an excuse to skip studying
- b) It helps them stay focused, healthy, and productive
- c) It replaces the need to complete assignments
- d) It makes college less serious

6. Overall, what attitude should students have to succeed in college?

- a) Laziness and carelessness
- b) Discipline, dedication, and positivity
- c) Stress and worry about grades only
- d) Dependence on others to do their work

"Vision Private School's Vision: A distinguished educational institution that nurtures knowledge, creativity, and values, preparing students to excel in an ever-changing world."

Read the text and answer the questions. Choose the correct ONE answer (A, B or C).

In college, many students express strong opinions about the concept of sharing, especially when it comes to resources such as bikes, cars, study materials, and even personal items. Sharing is often viewed as an essential part of student life, since most young people are living away from home for the first time and are learning to adapt to limited budgets, small dorm spaces, and busy schedules. Because of this, students often see sharing as a practical way to save money, reduce waste, and build stronger connections with others. Many students believe that bike sharing and car sharing programs are convenient and affordable ways to travel without the financial and practical burdens of owning a vehicle. They appreciate that these systems promote flexibility, independence, and environmental sustainability, as well as reducing traffic and parking problems around campuses. At the same time, they recognize some disadvantages, such as limited availability during peak hours, occasional issues with maintenance, and the possibility that frequent use might end up being costly over time. Overall, transportation sharing is seen as helpful, but not without its challenges.

Beyond transportation, students also hold strong views on sharing academic resources. Many find it helpful to exchange class notes, textbooks, or digital study guides, as this fosters collaboration and helps them learn more effectively. Working in study groups is often praised for creating a sense of community, allowing students to explain concepts to each other and develop teamwork skills. However, some students feel that relying too much on shared academic resources can reduce independence and may cause problems if the shared information is not accurate. In this way, sharing in academics is valued, but it also requires responsibility and trust among students.

When it comes to personal belongings, opinions about sharing tend to be more mixed. Some students feel comfortable lending items like clothes, electronics, or supplies to close friends or roommates, as this can strengthen relationships and reduce the need to buy new things. Others, however, express concern about items being lost, damaged, or not returned, which can cause unnecessary tension in friendships or living situations. Because of this, many students believe it is important to set clear boundaries about what they are willing to share and what they prefer to keep private.

Despite these challenges, many students acknowledge that sharing plays an important role in building trust, responsibility, and cooperation during college years. Overall, students' opinions reflect both enthusiasm and caution: while they appreciate the economic, social, and environmental benefits of sharing, they also recognize the importance of respecting personal property. For most, sharing is not just about saving money or resources, but also about creating a supportive college community where students learn from one another, help each other succeed, and prepare for life beyond campus.

1. Why do many students view sharing as an important part of college life?

- a) Because it allows them to avoid studying
- b) Because it helps them adapt to limited budgets and busy schedules
- c) Because it replaces the need for personal responsibility
- d) Because it is required by the college

2. What do students appreciate most about bike sharing and car sharing programs?

- a) They never break down
- b) They are completely free of cost
- c) They provide flexibility, independence, and sustainability
- d) They guarantee vehicles are always available

3. What is one major challenge students face with transportation sharing?

- a) Too much free space on campus
- b) Limited availability during peak hours
- c) Vehicles being too luxurious
- d) Students refusing to use them

4. Why do many students value sharing academic resources?

- a) It allows them to avoid attending classes
- b) It creates a sense of community and improves learning
- c) It guarantees perfect grades
- d) It means they never need textbooks

5. What is a possible disadvantage of relying too much on shared academic resources?

- a) It makes exams easier
- b) It reduces independence and may spread inaccurate information
- c) It helps students save money on materials
- d) It ensures students study more effectively

6. How do students generally feel about sharing personal belongings?

- a) Everyone is always comfortable with it
- b) Most students refuse to share anything
- c) Opinions are mixed, with both benefits and concerns
- d) It is strictly forbidden in dorms

7. What is one risk students worry about when sharing personal items?

- a) Items being lost, damaged, or not returned
- b) Items being too expensive to use
- c) Items being upgraded too quickly
- d) Items being disliked by others
