The Changing World of Food Shopping

Every year, news channels and websites publish a prediction about what type of food people will prefer in restaurants and supermarkets. Recently, a surprising number of people have started paying much more attention to food quality and ingredients. A growing number of people are willing to pay a higher price and a rate of premium for meals called gourmet food. Gourmet food is not only about the taste.

Many food experts say that the experience is the most important part. For example, there are special cafés inside modern shopping malls, which are located between clothing stores and cinema entrances. Other cafés are found next to department stores, or even directly opposite large electronics shops. However, these places are not always profitable.

Many small food companies now say that e-commerce has become the strongest competition. A customer can simply order organic vegetables and special ingredients online. They do not need to travel, find parking, or sit in traffic. It is faster at home, and the apps include more categories of all kinds of food. There are even world famous billionaire investors who invest in e-commerce food delivery apps. Some of these delivery companies are now bigger than supermarket chains.

Traditional shops with high rent and few customers are slowly starting to lose business and sometimes they have to close down. Although people still enjoy the taste of fresh food in creative restaurants, the future is moving clearly online.

1. The text mainly talks about...

A) the history of gourmet food
B) the future of food shopping habits
C) the price of vegetables

2. “a rate of premium” means...

A) a lower discount
B) a normal price
C) a higher price

3. Where are many modern cafés located?

A) inside gas stations
B) inside modern shopping malls
C) inside universities

Success in University: Building Effective Study Habits

If you want to be a successful university student, you must be prepared from the first week. The most important habit is to be organised. Many students do not have a clear plan and then they become stressed. You need to pay attention to your study routine, because university classes are different from school.

In university, students are expected to attend class on time, join class discussions, and take responsibility for deadlines. You should always pay attention during lectures. If you don't understand something, ask your teacher or tutor for help. While you listen, always take notes, because note-taking helps you remember the information later when you are doing your weekly assignment.

If you have good study skills and work hard, you will get good grades, and you will not miss important information that will come in future exams. University is not only for passing tests. The purpose is to learn deeply and to earn a degree that will help you get a future job. Having a study routine also helps prevent last-minute panic. Plan your time carefully, organise your materials, review your notes every day, and take action early.

When you repeat this system week after week, you become confident, disciplined, and independent. Teachers and employers want students who show strong responsibility and a positive attitude. Follow these simple steps and you will feel more confident in class discussions, and you will be more ready for the level of academic work that university expects.

1. According to paragraph 1, what happens to many students who do not have a clear plan? (2 marks)

A. They arrive late to their weekly lectures.
B. They become stressed.
C. They stop joining class discussions.

2. What should a university student do if they do not understand something in a lecture? (2 marks)

A. Ask their teacher or tutor for help.
B. Wait until the final exam to read the notes.
C. Skip the weekly assignment for that class.

3. Why does the writer advise students to take notes while listening? (2 marks)

A. Because it allows them to leave lectures early.
B. Because it replaces the need to attend class on time.
C. Because it helps them remember information for their weekly assignment.

4. According to paragraph 3, what is the deeper purpose of university beyond passing tests? (2 marks)

A. To learn deeply and earn a degree that helps you get a future job.
B. To finish all materials at the last minute before exams.
C. To avoid reviewing daily notes during the semester.

5. In paragraph 3, what does the expression "last-minute panic" most likely mean? (2 marks)

A. Feeling calm and prepared weeks before an exam.

B. Sudden stress and worry caused by leaving work until right before a deadline.

C. A short break taken after finishing a weekly assignment early.

6. In paragraph 4, the word "independent" (formed with the prefix "in-" meaning "not") means being able to _____. (2 marks)

A. rely completely on classmates to complete weekly assignments

B. avoid listening carefully during university lectures

C. manage your own learning and responsibilities without always relying on others

7. Based on the text and real-world experience, why do employers prefer graduates who built strong study habits at university? (2 marks)

A. Because habits like meeting deadlines, discipline, and a positive attitude carry over directly to workplace success.

B. Because employers expect workers never to ask colleagues or managers for help.

C. Because having a study routine removes the need to learn new skills after university.

8. What is the overall main idea of the text? (2 marks)

A. University lectures are much easier than school classes when students skip note-taking.

B. Developing an organised study routine and responsible habits leads to academic and future career success.

C. Passing exams is the only reason students choose to attend university.

Part 4: Writing

40 marks total

Hi Samira,

I hope your week is going well! I am writing to tell you about my latest online shopping experience because I could really use your advice.

Last Friday, I searched several trusted websites to find lightweight wireless headphones for my daily study sessions. One popular store offered a huge weekend discount and free next-day delivery, so I ordered a blue pair immediately using a gift card.

At first, I felt thrilled when the parcel arrived right on schedule. However, when I opened the box, the left speaker made a strange buzzing sound and the charging cable was missing. I felt disappointed and frustrated because I had read five-star reviews before buying. Luckily, customer service responded quickly, accepted my receipt photo, and promised a full refund once I return the damaged item.

Now I am unsure whether to order from another website or visit a local shopping mall instead. What do you think I should do?

Best wishes,

Noura
