How has the internet and technology affected education?

Technology and the internet have had a great impact on education. In the past, students mainly used books to find information. Today, they can use the internet and modern technology to learn more easily. Some people believe that technology is very useful in education, while others think it has some negative effects. This essay discusses some positive and negative sides of using the internet and technology in education.

On the one hand, the internet and technology have many advantages. First, students can easily find information about different subjects and study independently. They can also use educational websites, videos, and applications to understand their lessons better. In addition, technology can make learning more interesting and enjoyable for both students and teachers.

On the other hand, there are some disadvantages. Students may depend too much on the internet and become less able to think and solve problems independently. Besides, they may copy other people's work instead of doing their own research. Moreover, some information online may be false or unreliable.

In conclusion, it is evident that technology has both positive and negative impacts on education. Therefore, it is important to use technology in moderation. I believe students should use it wisely to benefit from its advantages and avoid its disadvantages.

Using mobile phones at school

Using mobile phones at school is a widely discussed issue. Some people believe that mobile phones are useful educational tools, while others think they can negatively affect students' behaviour and learning. This essay discusses both views.

On the one hand, mobile phones can help students learn in different ways. For example, they can use educational apps, videos, QR codes, calculators, and dictionaries. Students can also use their phones to find information quickly. In addition, mobile phones can help parents stay in contact with their children when necessary.

On the other hand, mobile phones can cause several problems at school. First, they may distract students from their lessons. Some students may play games, use social media, or chat with friends instead of listening to their teachers. Moreover, phones can be used for cheating in exams. Excessive phone use may also cause problems such as eye strain and neck pain.

In conclusion, , it is evident that mobile phones have both positive and negative impacts on students at school. In my opinion, their disadvantages are greater. Therefore, students should use them only when they need them for learning at school.
