Write a summary

To write an effective summary, there are different steps to follow.

1. First, read the original text for general understanding. Then read it again more carefully and underline the main ideas, points and facts.
2. Use your notes to write your first draft. Start by restating the main points and important details of the original text. A summary should be shorter than the original—about one-third as long or less—and should include different words from the original when possible. Avoid adding or changing the original text's ideas. Also do not express your opinion or evaluate the text.

You can organise your summary in the following way:

- 1-Begin with an introductory statement that gives the title of the text and author's name (if known).
- 2-Add the overall main idea of the text. You can also mention the author's purpose if you know or can infer it.
- 3-Add a new sentence for each main point in the text. Include the main supporting details, either in the same sentence or in a new sentence.
- 4-Finish with a concluding sentence that restates the overall main point.

(The problem -solution essay)

Solutions to the problem of water pollution

Water pollution is a major issue around the world, affecting millions of people and causing problems with farming, health, and economies. To effectively tackle this growing problem, everyone needs to contribute. Individuals, companies, and governments must all take action to solve it.

To begin with, individuals have a significant role to play in this effort. Every person can help by making small things, for instance, we can reduce using water at home. These actions may seem small, but when many people adopt them, the overall impact on solving the problem can be enormous.

On the other hand, businesses need to take responsibility too. Companies can adopt new technologies that minimize the problem and find innovative ways to solve it. By doing this, they also set a positive example for others in their industry to follow, promoting sustainability on a larger scale.

Last but not least, governments can make a major impact by implementing policies that encourage others to make improvements. Effective policies also can be taken efficiently across all sectors. Additionally, governments can motivate individuals and businesses to adopt new ways for raising awareness and offering incentives like tax reductions.

In conclusion, although water pollution is a serious challenge, it is one that can be overcome if we all work together. Through the joint actions of individuals, businesses, and policymakers, we can contain this environmental menace. The journey towards a cleaner planet requires each of us to take part in fostering a sustainable future.

A template for PROBLEM – SOLUTION ESSAY

There is no doubt that POLLUTION has become one of the most serious problems that affects people greatly nowadays. To effectively tackle this growing problem, everyone needs to contribute. Individuals, companies and governments must all take action to solve it. A lot of conferences and meetings were held recently to find solutions to such problems.

To begin with, individuals have a vital role to play in this field. Every person can help by making small things, One of the suggested solutions is recycling . In addition, We should make eco-friendly factories . What is more, we shouldn't throw plastic and rubbish in the sea. .These actions may seem small, but when many people do them, the result will be amazing.

On the other hand, Companies should take responsibility too. They can adopt new technologies that reduce the problem and find creative ways to solve it. By doing this, they also set a positive example for others to follow.

Finally, governments can make a great impact by making policies that encourage others to make improvements. Effective policies also can be taken in all sectors. Additionally, governments can motivate individuals and companies to adopt new ways for raising awareness and offering rewards like tax reductions.

In conclusion, although POLLUTION is a serious challenge, it is one that can be overcome if we all work together. We should set a regular plan and call all specialists to help us find quick and constant solutions to such problems. To solve this problem, the state must join forces with citizens and companies. Through joint actions, we will be able to uproot this problem completely.

A Review of a product

Recently, I was shopping online, and I saw on sale. Usually, I read reviews before buying anything. However, I decided to buy it because I needed it urgently. The price was low, and it has many advantages. In fact, I'm glad to buy it.

There are many advantages about First, it's user-friendly. It is much easier than any other product. This means I save my time and effort. Additionally, it's eco-friendly because it can be recycled. Also, it has wonderful functions, and it is elegant in shape. In other words, "beauty outside, beast inside". Moreover, it is durable and is supposed to last for a long time. The final good point is the price. Similar products are usually not as cheap as that. In fact, it's the best price I've ever paid for Although I like a lot, there are two things that I don't like in it. First, It is not as reliable as I would like. The performance is poor, and a lot of functions are not available. I would prefer a more stable performance. Because it breaks down sometimes, it can be frustrating for me. Second, I was disappointed with the customer support service. All hotlines don't respond. Also, it seems to be less professional and got a two-star rating from international magazines. Plus, it has a lot of passive reviews online.

Overall, the is great, and I definitely recommend it. In fact, I'm going to buy another one, though I'll hope for improvements in reliability and customer service next time.

A Review of My Trainers

Recently I was shopping online, and I saw a pair of trainers on sale. Usually, I read reviews before I buy anything online. However, in this case, I just decided to buy them because I needed a new one. The price was low, and suitable for me. On the whole, I'm glad I made that decision.

There are several things that I especially like about the shoes . First , they're better for the environment. I didn't know this when I bought them, but they can apparently be recycled easily because they were made using a "cradle-to-cradle design process." The final good point is the price. I got them for a reasonable price and good trainers are usually not as cheap as that. In fact, it's probably the best price I've ever paid for quality products.

Although I like the shoes a lot, there are two things that I find less appealing. First, they are not as stylish as I would like. Additionally, Because the design is so bright, people often ask me where I got them. At first, I thought this was funny, but it's becoming more frustrating now because it happens almost all the time. Second, I was disappointed that the shoes were wrapped in plastic inside the box. These shoes are supposed to be good for the planet, so I feel the plastic wasn't needed.

Overall, the shoes are great, and I definitely recommend them. In fact, I'm going to buy another one with nice colours next time!

Writing 4 (A compare and contrast essay)

Two Different Experiences

Secondary school and college serve as pivotal stages in our life. For most of us, these two institutions hold a very special position in our hearts. Who doesn't love school or college these days? In fact, although secondary school and college may look similar in many ways, they do offer completely different experiences.

To begin with, both secondary school and college play crucial roles in shaping a person's future. They provide a structured curriculum that includes a variety of subjects, which are essential for acquiring a broad knowledge base. Additionally, both environments encourage social interaction and extracurricular activities, allowing students to develop interpersonal skills and explore interests beyond the classroom.

However, the differences between secondary school and college are quite pronounced. Secondary school typically has a more rigid schedule and stricter oversight, with teachers closely monitoring students' progress. In contrast, college offers greater autonomy, with students being responsible for managing their time and learning. The teaching style in college also tends to be more learner-focused, promoting extensive research and self-study, as opposed to the often textbook-based approach in secondary school and the focus on developing general knowledge and skills.

In conclusion, while secondary school and college share the common goal of educating students, they differ in their approach to teaching, level of independence granted to students, and overall learning atmosphere. Recognising these similarities and differences can help students transition smoothly from one stage to the next and make the most of their educational experiences.
