14

Katy Payne loves to listen to all kinds of sounds. She loves to listen to music, of course. But mostly, she listens to animals. And she has spent most of her life doing it. By listening to them she has helped them live on.

Katy first studied whales and the wonderful sounds they make under the water. Some people call them “whale songs” as they sound like strange music. Katy knew that elephants were like whales in some ways. They were both large creatures. And they both cared for their young. Katy wanted to study elephants, too.

Katy went to a zoo to see and hear the elephants. She watched and listened. She liked to hear the sounds they made. There were loud sounds and soft sounds. They hummed and made trumpet sounds. The sounds made Katy think of whale songs. She knew that whales sometimes made sounds that she could not hear. That gave Katy a great idea. What if elephants make hidden sounds too? She went to find out. First, Katy taped the sounds of elephants. Then she took the tapes to a lab. She used a computer to make pictures of the sound waves. The pictures showed sounds that Katy could not hear. The elephants were making hidden sounds! No one had ever seen hidden sounds from elephants. Katy had found something special.

Katy became worried about elephants.

People and elephants do not always live well near each other. Sometimes elephants eat people’s crops, and people get angry. Sometimes careless people build homes on land that elephants use. It is hard for these elephants to survive. Katy wanted the two to be able to live near each other.

Katy started a project with some friends. They listen to the sounds of elephants to get to know them better. This helps people know more and understand elephants. Therefore, the more people know elephants the more they would want to help. Katy and her friend also use the sounds to count the elephants. They have found that there are fewer now than there used to be.
