Sami looked around, but no one was nearby. For a moment, he thought, "I could keep the money. No one saw me". But then he felt sad for that bad idea. He remembered what his teacher had said: "Doing the right thing is important, even when no one is watching." So, he walked to the park office and gave the wallet to the park worker. "Thank you so much! That photo of a family," he said kindly. "Oh! There is a woman looking for it!" The park worker said.

The next day, Sami got a phone call. A woman said, "Thank you so much! That wallet belongs to my daughter. You are a very honest boy." Sami smiled. He felt proud and happy. Sami knew that being honest is more important than keeping money.
