Read the following passage carefully, then answer the questions below:

Long ago, there were no airplanes. People wanted to fly. Many people tried to invent something, but they couldn't. Until the two brothers did it. They invented the world's first successful airplane. They were named Orville and Wilbur Wright. They were well known as the "Wright Brothers". When they told people they were working on the invention of something that would fly, people made fun of their ideas. They thought they would never be able to do it. The brothers' father bought them interesting toys so that they could play and think. He had many books so he asked them to read a lot.
