Reading ComprehensionRead the passage and answer the questions:

Some people believe that smart cities are the future of modern life. These cities use advanced technology to make transportation, energy, and communication faster and easier. Smart cities help save time, reduce traffic, and improve the quality of life for citizens. They also use sensors to control streetlights, waste collection, and water systems automatically. This makes the city more efficient, meaning it works well without wasting time or energy. Supporters say smart cities create safer and cleaner places to live.

However, not everyone agrees. Some people worry that smart cities collect too much personal data, like where people go or what they buy. They fear that information could be misused or stolen. Others say that building and running smart cities costs a lot of money, which could be better used for education or healthcare. They also believe that technology can sometimes replace human workers, causing job loss. In the end, people must decide whether the benefits of smart cities are greater than their possible problems. They will shape the way our future cities look and work.

A. Choose the right answer:

Reading ComprehensionRead the passage and answer the questions:

Traditional sports like football, basketball, and tennis have been played for many years. They need physical energy, teamwork, and outdoor spaces. Players train their bodies to run fast, jump high, and stay strong. These sports help people build fitness and learn cooperation. Fans also enjoy watching live games and cheering for their favorite teams.

On the other hand, e-sports are video game competitions played on computers or consoles. They need quick thinking, focus, and hand–eye coordination. Although players do not move much, they train their minds and practice daily to get better. E-sports are becoming very popular because they are easy to watch online and connect people from around the world. Both traditional sports and e-sports bring people joy, challenge, and a sense of teamwork, but they use different kinds of skills.

Reading ComprehensionRead the passage and answer the questions:

People have always looked at the stars and dreamed of visiting them. Many believe that space exploration is important for the future of humankind. It helps us discover new planets and learn more about our universe. Space travel also brings new inventions that make our lives easier, like better computers and satellites. Some people say it gives jobs to scientists and inspires young students to study science. Others think it teaches countries to work together. They see space as a place for peace, not war.

However, not everyone agrees. Some scientists say space exploration is too expensive and dangerous. Rockets use fuel that can harm the environment. They believe that we should spend money to solve problems on Earth, such as hunger and pollution. Astronauts also face big risks in space, and not all missions are successful. Although space travel sounds exciting, many worry that only rich countries benefit from it. In the end, people still discuss whether exploring space is really worth the cost.

Reading ComprehensionRead the passage and answer the questions:

Astronauts face many problems when they live and work in space. First, there is no gravity, so their muscles get weak and bones lose strength. They also feel sick at first because their body is not used to floating. Radiation from space can harm their health and cause cancer. Living far from Earth makes them feel lonely and stressed. They eat special food from tubes and sleep in bags tied to the wall.

Scientists are working on good solutions for these problems. Astronauts use bikes and straps to exercise two hours each day. This helps keep muscles and bones strong. New shields block some radiation. For loneliness, they talk to family by video and use games or virtual reality. Smart machines grow food like plants in space. These ideas make life better for long trips to Mars.

Reading ComprehensionRead the passage and answer the questions:

If people want to protect the environment, one of the most effective steps is to waste less. Every year, millions of tons of food, plastic, and paper are thrown away, while much of it could be reused or recycled. This careless behavior damages the planet because landfills release harmful gases that pollute the air, and plastics poison rivers and seas. Imagine how different our world would be if each person decided to buy only what they needed. Such a choice might sound small, but its impact would be enormous.

Another powerful step is replacing single-use items with durable ones. For example, instead of using plastic bottles, people can carry refillable ones. Instead of throwing clothes away, people can donate or repair them. When people act responsibly, they show respect for those who will live on this planet after us. Reducing waste is more than just a habit; it is a moral duty. If citizens and governments cooperate, humans can create smarter systems of recycling and invent eco-friendly products. A waste-conscious lifestyle is not only about saving money, but also about saving the planet itself.

A. Choose the right answer:

- The best title for this passage is:
 (A) How to Make More Money (B) Waste Less, Save the Planet
 (C) A World Without People (D) The History of Pollution
- The underlined word impact in the passage means:
 (A) problem (B) effect (C) gift (D) decision

B. Answer the following questions:

- Why does the writer describe reducing waste as a moral duty?

- In your opinion, what is one practical step teenagers can take to waste less every day.
