FE- Reading 2

Last month, I was sent by my news agency to Nepal to interview the Minister of Tourism and Culture for the newspaper. In the interview, the minister talked a lot about the importance of tourism to the economy of Nepal. He explained that the government in Nepal hopes to increase Nepal's income from tourism to 800$ million by 2030, which twice as much as now.

At present, Nepal has many visitors from Europe and the United States, but even more from Japan, India and China. He also said that people are especially attracted to Nepal because of its wonderful mountain scenery. However, it is often difficult for visitors to travel around the country to see these places. Roads are often in bad condition, and airports are small and old-fashioned. So, the government first has to renew roads and develop airports, which will create new job opportunities in Nepal.

In fact, I agree with a lot of what the minister said in the interview. For example, it is true that attracting tourists to Nepal will increase job opportunities and increase their income. However, I am worried about this focus on tourism.

As you know, my work on writing on environmental issues has made me learn a lot about the negative impacts of tourism on the natural environment. Tourism will attract more and more people from everywhere, but very few people will care for the wonderful nature of Nepal, and more tourists lead to more pollution due to transport and tour service development.

I think the Nepalese government need to pay more attention to increasing income through power projects. It has a much higher opportunity to increase income by constructing and developing sustainable power plants. Nepal is the world's second richest country in inland water resources, with over 6,000 rivers. Therefore, it can meet not just its own electricity needs, but also offer energy to its neighbors like Bangladesh and India, who suffer from lack of energy in most parts.

Finally, I think I will apologize to my agency for not accepting to write an article approving the minister's plans and ideas. I think I should focus on writing to raise awareness about environmental issues.

FE- Reading 2

Last month, I was sent by my news agency to Nepal to interview the Minister of Tourism and Culture for the newspaper. In the interview, the minister talked a lot about the importance of tourism to the economy of Nepal. He explained that the government in Nepal hopes to increase Nepal's income from tourism to 800$ million by 2030, which twice as much as now.

At present, Nepal has many visitors from Europe and the United States, but even more from Japan, India and China. He also said that people are especially attracted to Nepal because of its wonderful mountain scenery. However, it is often difficult for visitors to travel around the country to see these places. Roads are often in bad condition, and airports are small and old-fashioned. So, the government first has to renew roads and develop airports, which will create new job opportunities in Nepal.

In fact, I agree with a lot of what the minister said in the interview. For example, it is true that attracting tourists to Nepal will increase job opportunities and increase their income. However, I am worried about this focus on tourism.

As you know, my work on writing on environmental issues has made me learn a lot about the negative impacts of tourism on the natural environment. Tourism will attract more and more people from everywhere, but very few people will care for the wonderful nature of Nepal, and more tourists lead to more pollution due to transport and tour service development.

I think the Nepalese government need to pay more attention to increasing income through power projects. It has a much higher opportunity to increase income by constructing and developing sustainable power plants. Nepal is the world's second richest country in inland water resources, with over 6,000 rivers. Therefore, it can meet not just its own electricity needs, but also offer energy to its neighbors like Bangladesh and India, who suffer from lack of energy in most parts.

Finally, I think I must apologize to my agency for not accepting to write an article approving the minister's plans and ideas. I think I should focus on writing to raise awareness about environmental issues.

It was near the end of August last year. All the boys in our village were playing football before starting school in September. News reports had been saying that a powerful hurricane was going to hit the town in the coming hours. For me as a child it meant nothing. I didn't know what a hurricane was; I had never experienced one. However, my parents had told me stories of the destruction that the last hurricane had caused thirty years ago.

It was just before sunset. The football was over, and everybody went home, happy or sad depending on the result of their match. When I arrived, I could see that my parents were worried by the news of the coming hurricane. So finally I started to worry, too!

Three hours later, news reports were warning people living in different areas, including ours, to leave their homes or stay in safe places. My father asked for a family meeting to take a decision-whether to leave or to stay. The majority decided to stay, so that we could protect our home and our property. My mother said: "Our house is made of stone, unlike our poor neighbours with their wooden houses." Then we made sure that all the doors and windows were secured. It said on the radio that there were still five hours before the hurricane would hit the town. So we sat there together in the dark waiting for the hurricane to come, terrified by the growing sound of the wind.

Finally, the hurricane hit the town at around four in the morning. I could see through the window how the wind was blowing down trees and blowing away the roofs of houses. I held my father's hand, and he told me that everything would be alright and that I shouldn't be afraid.

Three hours later, it was all over. It was no longer dark, so I went out with my father to see the scene of destruction outside our house. It was unbelievable! All sorts of things lying everywhere on the ground and every house badly damaged or totally destroyed! We also two people who were badly injured, and tried to help them. Not everyone had been as lucky as us.

1. How had the writer spent the day before the hurricane started?

2. How did his family get news about the hurricane?

3. Why did the family decide not to leave home?
because

4. Who was injured in the writer's family?

5. The hurricane happened in _____.

July August September

6. Before the story happened, the writer had _____.

seen lots of hurricanes only once seen a hurricane never seen a hurricane

7. While waiting for the hurricane, the writer _____.

ate some food sat with his father went to sleep

8. The hurricane finally stopped _____.

just before sunset just after sunrise at around midday
