READING(5 marks)

Read the text. Then complete the task.

Oman and Egypt have a long history of friendship and communication. Historical sources show that connections between the two countries go back to ancient times. Trade played an important role in these early connections. Oman was famous for frankincense, which was an important product in the ancient world. Historical evidence also shows that frankincense from Oman was traded with ancient Egypt. These connections helped people exchange products and develop cultural links.

The relationship continued to develop over the centuries. Oman became well known for its maritime activities and trade routes. Egypt, with its important location and long history, also remained an important centre for trade and culture. These historical connections became part of the strong relationship between the two countries.

In modern times, Oman and Egypt established official diplomatic relations in 1972. Since then, the two countries have worked together in many areas. These include education, culture, trade, investment and other fields. The two countries also have a joint committee that helps strengthen cooperation and discuss new opportunities.

Economic cooperation is an important part of the relationship today. In 2025, officials from Oman and Egypt discussed ways to increase trade and investment. They also discussed cooperation in transport and logistics. A maritime cooperation agreement focuses on areas such as ports, transport, exchanging information and sharing experience.

The relationship between Oman and Egypt is special because it has both deep historical roots and strong modern connections. I believe that cooperation in education, culture and business can bring the two countries even closer. Young people can also play an important role by learning about each other's history, identity and culture.

For each question, write a short answer (not more than FOUR WORDS)

1. What was Oman famous for?

2. What did these early connections help people do?

3. When did official diplomatic relations begin?

4. What helps strengthen cooperation between the countries?

5. What can bring the two countries closer?
