At Katara, people can walk by the beach, visit art galleries, and watch shows at the theater. There are many restaurants and cafes. You can try delicious food from different countries. I enjoyed walking and taking pictures.

The Islamic Art Museum is one of the best sightseeing places I have visited in Qatar. It is located on the Doha Corniche. The museum has a beautiful view of the water and the city skyline. It is a great place for people who love art, history, and culture.

The Islamic Art Museum was opened in 2008. It was designed by the famous architect I.M. Pei. He also designed many great buildings around the world. The building looks very modern. It was made to protect and show Islamic art, collected from many countries and ages. In it, you can see items like old books, coins, textiles, pottery, and jewelry.

This museum is famous for its big collection of Islamic art from 1400 years ago. People come to visit it from all over the world. It also has a library, a café, and a gift shop. The place is attracting. Visitors can enjoy learning about the beauty of Islamic history. I really enjoyed my visit. I recommend it to everyone inside and outside Qatar.

1) Write AN ARGUMENTATIVE ESSAY to discuss “Advantages & Disadvantages Of Having Big Families”.

- Consider the following notes; “advantages; fun time & support” and “disadvantages; privacy absence & bad habits”.
- Use appropriate writing style, suitable vocabulary items & correct grammatical rules.
- Make sure your ideas are well-organized and pay attention to punctuation. Divide your article into three or more connected paragraphs.

Some people have big families with many brothers and sisters. A big family has many good sides. It also has some bad sides.

One advantage of a big family is support. You always have someone to help you when you are sad. You also never feel alone. Another good thing is fun. Big families have fun times together. You can play games, talk, and laugh every day.

There are also some problems. One big problem is no privacy. It is hard to find a quiet place when many people are in the house. You also share your things with many others. Another disadvantage is bad habits. If someone in the family has a bad habit, others may copy it easily.

Finally, big families have love and support. They also bring some noise and problems. I think it is nice to have a big family. It is also important to have respect and space for each other.

2) Write An Argumentative Essay about “ADVANTAGES AND DISADVANTAGES OF GROUP STUDYING”.

- Consider the following notes; “advantages; helping weak students, sharing information & more understanding” and “disadvantages; wasting time, noise with no benefits & lack of family control”.
- Use appropriate writing style, suitable vocabulary items & correct grammatical rules.
- Make sure your ideas are well-organized and pay attention to punctuation. Divide your article into three or more connected paragraphs.

Group studying is a way of learning where students study together in small groups. Some students prefer it because they feel it is more fun and helpful. Others think it is not always useful. Group studying has advantages and disadvantages.

One advantage of group studying is that it helps weak students. Strong students can explain lessons and answer questions. Students can also share information and learn new ideas from each other. When students talk and discuss, they understand the subject better. This can lead to better marks and more confidence.

On the other hand, group studying has some disadvantages. Students sometimes waste time talking about things not related to study. There can also be too much noise, which makes it hard to focus. In some cases, parents cannot control their children's time or know what they are doing.

In conclusion, group studying has both good and bad sides. It helps students learn from one another. It can also cause distractions. Students should be serious when studying in a group. Parents should continually guide them. If used in the right way, group studying can be a great way to learn and succeed.

3) Write A STORY about a situation you had in the past that wholly changed your life and made you a better person.

- Consider the following notes; time, place, characters, sequence of actions & a suitable finish.

- Use appropriate writing style, suitable vocabulary items & correct grammatical rules.

- Make sure your ideas are well-organized and pay attention to punctuation. Divide your article into three or more connected paragraphs.

Last year, a situation made me a better person. It was during Semester 1. I was calm in class. I didn't help others much.

One day, a classmate forgot his homework. The teacher was angry. My classmate asked for my help. I had an extra copy of homework. I didn't give it to him. Later, he told me he was sick. He had no time to study. I felt really bad.

From that day, I became kinder. I started helping my classmates. I shared my notes and explained lessons. I joined class activities and spoke more. My teacher was happy. I made more friends.

This situation made me helpful. Now, I feel good about myself. Helping others made me stronger.

- 4) Write A STORY about “A RISKY EXPERIENCE” you had in the past.
- Consider the following notes; the people in the story, place of actions, what specifically happened and how the end was.
 - Use appropriate writing style, suitable vocabulary items & correct grammatical rules.
 - Make sure your ideas are well-organized and pay attention to punctuation. Divide your article into three or more connected paragraphs.

Last year, I had a risky experience when I went camping with my cousin in the desert near AlWakrah. We were excited because it was our first time camping without adults. We packed food, water, a tent, and a flashlight. We drove there in the afternoon.

After setting up the tent, we started exploring the area. Everything was fine until it got dark. Suddenly, we noticed that we couldn't find our way back to the tent. We had walked too far. The desert looked the same in every direction. We felt scared and cold. Our phones had no signal. We were almost out of water. We sat under a tree, trying to stay calm.

Luckily, after some time, we saw car lights in the distance. It was a group of other campers. They helped us get back safely to our tent. We thanked them and promised to never go far from camp again. From that day, I learned to always plan better and be more careful. It was a scary experience. It taught me an important lesson about safety and being responsible.

5) Qatar tries hard to handle drainage water in a safe way. The government has done many projects to achieve the utmost they can in this field. Write “A CAUSE-AND-EFFECT ESSAY” about this environmental problem and talk about what Qatar has done in this side.

- Consider the following notes; how much drainage water they daily handle, what they used to do with drainage water in the past & which modern techniques they currently use.
- Use appropriate writing style, suitable vocabulary items & correct grammatical rules.
- Make sure your ideas are well-organized and pay attention to punctuation. Divide your article into three or more connected paragraphs.

Drainage water is a big environmental problem in many countries. It can cause pollution, bad smells, and health problems. In Qatar, the government works hard to solve this problem. The country has taken strong steps to treat and reuse drainage water in a safe and useful way.

In the past, Qatar used to throw drainage water into the sea. This caused harm to marine life and the environment. People didn't know how to treat this water properly. But now, the situation has changed. Qatar handles over 280,000 cubic meters of drainage water every day. This is a very big amount, but the country is using modern technology to deal with it.

Today, Qatar uses advanced treatment plants to clean drainage water. The water becomes clean enough to be used in watering plants, cleaning streets, and even in cooling systems. One famous project is the Doha North Sewage Treatment Plant, which uses new methods to clean water. This helps protect the environment and save clean water for drinking.

In conclusion, Qatar has made great progress in handling drainage water. The cause of the problem was poor systems in the past. But the effect of modern systems today is a cleaner and safer country. Qatar is a good example of how to solve environmental problems with smart ideas.
