Text A	Text B
Those who don't have the time to travel for a few weeks and more can look into weekend travel. This can be anything from a short road trip to a full 2-day city break. Weekend gateway travel is ideal for those who want multiple travel holidays throughout the year. Most of these weekend holidays are limited by the space you can cover travelling. You can even fly to your destination, but the flight should typically be short. One- or two-hour flights are ideal when you're limited on time so that a few free hours remain to visit remarkable places and to enjoy your destination longer. This type of travel is exceptional because of many reasons. First, it's more suitable for busy lifestyle. Second, it's not as costly as full travel that lasts longer and that makes it affordable as you only need to plan for two days of accommodations, a few meals, and entertainment. Finally, it's perfect for individuals and small groups.	If you fly somewhere on behalf of your company, you are one of the millions of people involved in business travel each year worldwide. The term business travel refers to travelling for work purposes. This type of travel can last from one day up to a few weeks, depending on what work you need to attend and achieve. Attending a conference, a meeting or a trade show is a type of business travel. Many professionals on a business trip are typically staying for multiple days so they have the time to work deeply on one or multiple projects. Business travel is seen both inside the country and abroad. Almost all business travel costs and expenses are covered by the employer. This involves flight tickets, transportations, meals, and accommodation. Business travel expenses can be high and in most cases, there's no flexibility for things such as travel dates and the nearness of the accommodation. At the same time, the reward is which can earn the employer more in the future.

1. My name is Lucy Santana, and I'm a hospital clown doctor. I work for Mercy Children's Hospital ae in New York City. I treat children with a new kind F of medicine: laughter. Kids like to call me Dr. LooLoo. I spend two days a week in the hospital doing very amusing and hilarious things with my husband and colleague Dr. Eddy. We make comical faces, tell jokes, and do magic tricks. Also, when we walk into the wards, we blow bubbles, shake hands with the kids, and make up nonsense songs for those children who are well enough to sing. We take special balloons to make 'balloon animals' and tell funny stories about them.

2. I'm naturally a very cheerful person. I've always been a clown. In fact, my father is a clown and I started working with him when I was eight years old. I knew it was just the job for me and I became a clown doctor because J think it's a great way to cheer up sick, anxious children in hospital. I wear a fancy coat, a yellow shirt, trousers with big stripes and a red rubber nose.

3. Being a clown in a hospital is very tiring both physically and emotionally. I have to learn not to show any-emotions, otherwise it would be useless. Now, I'm working with a very sick little girl from Bosnia who speaks no English, so our only common language is laughter. She's been in and out of hospital for operations so many times and she's always on my mind.

4. At lunchtime, Eddy and I eat in the hospital cafeteria and that's really useful because we meet the nurses and doctors. They tell us about particular kids who they think will benefit from a clown doctor's visit. When we-leave the hospital late in the evening, we usually feel so worn out that we can hardly walk to the door. At weekends, we often participate in charity events to raise money for Mercy Children's Hospital. We also bring the children's parents together as part of group therapy, and we even give lessons to kids who cannot express themselves well in English. All in all, being a clown doctor makes the worries of everyday life seem small and I feel so privileged and excited to do this job.

6. What is the text mainly about?

- A. The lessons clown doctors give sick children.
- B. The tasks of a medical doctor in children's hospital.
- C. The daily life of sick children in New York city hospital.
- D. The job of clown doctor and its efforts on sick children.

Freya Stark

1 Freya Stark was an explorer in a time when explorers were regarded as heroes. She travelled to distant areas of the Middle East, where few Europeans - especially women — had travelled before. She also travelled extensively in Turkey, Greece, Italy, Nepal and Afghanistan.

2 Stark was born in Paris in 1893. Although she had no formal school education as a child, she moved about with her artist parents and learned French, German and Italian. She entered London University in 1912, but at the start of World War I, she joined the army as a nurse and was sent to Italy. After the war, she returned to London and attended the College of Oriental Studies. Her studies there led to extensive travel in the Middle East, enabling her to eventually become fluent in Persian, Russian and Turkish.

3 Freya Stark became renowned as one of the first women travellers and explorers in the Middle East. She travelled to Lebanon in 1927 at the age of 34 when she had saved enough money, and while she was there, she studied Arabic. In 1928, she travelled by donkey to Jebel Druze, a mountain area in Syria. During another trip, she went to a remote mountain range in Iran and had a very busy time there. She collected information about the life of Muslims in that area and made a detailed map of the whole region. Before she travelled back home, she wrote a book about the habits and lifestyle of the local people based on the information she gathered. Later on in 1942, Stark was awarded a Gold Medal by the Royal Geographic Society for that book.

4 For the next 12 years, she continued her career as a traveller and writer, establishing a style which combined an account of her journeys with personal commentary on the people, places, customs, history and politics of the Middle East. She wrote more than a dozen books on her travels in the Middle East and Afghanistan and was of the first non-Arab travellers to "travel through the southern Arabian Desert.
