1. My name is Lucy Santana, and I'm a hospital clown doctor. I work for Mercy Children's Hospital ae in New York City. I treat children with a new kind F of medicine: laughter. Kids like to call me Dr. LooLoo. I spend two days a week in the hospital doing very amusing and hilarious things with my husband and colleague Dr. Eddy. We make comical faces, tell jokes, and do magic tricks. Also, when we walk into the wards, we blow bubbles, shake hands with the kids, and make up nonsense songs for those children who are well enough to sing. We take special balloons to make 'balloon animals' and tell funny stories about them.

2. I'm naturally a very cheerful person. I've always been a clown. In fact, my father is a clown and I started working with him when I was eight years old. I knew it was just the job for me and I became a clown doctor because J think it's a great way to cheer up sick, anxious children in hospital. I wear a fancy coat, a yellow shirt, trousers with big stripes and a red rubber nose.

3. Being a clown in a hospital is very tiring both physically and emotionally. I have to learn not to show any-emotions, otherwise it would be useless. Now, I'm working with a very sick little girl from Bosnia who speaks no English, so our only common language is laughter. She's been in and out of hospital for operations so many times and she's always on my mind.

4. At lunchtime, Eddy and I eat in the hospital cafeteria and that's really useful because we meet the nurses and doctors. They tell us about particular kids who they think will benefit from a clown doctor's visit. When we-leave the hospital late in the evening, we usually feel so worn out that we can hardly walk to the door. At weekends, we often participate in charity events to raise money for Mercy Children's Hospital. We also bring the children's parents together as part of group therapy, and we even give lessons to kids who cannot express themselves well in English. All in all, being a clown doctor makes the worries of everyday life seem small and I feel so privileged and excited to do this job.

Freya Stark

1 Freya Stark was an explorer in a time when explorers were regarded as heroes. She travelled to distant areas of the Middle East, where few Europeans - especially women — had travelled before. She also travelled extensively in Turkey, Greece, Italy, Nepal and Afghanistan.

2 Stark was born in Paris in 1893. Although she had no formal school education as a child, she moved about with her artist parents and learned French, German and Italian. She entered London University in 1912, but at the start of World War I, she joined the army as a nurse and was sent to Italy. After the war, she returned to London and attended the College of Oriental Studies. Her studies there led to extensive travel in the Middle East, enabling her to eventually become fluent in Persian, Russian and Turkish.

3 Freya Stark became renowned as one of the first women travellers and explorers in the Middle East. She collected information about the life of Muslims in that area and made a detailed map of the whole region. Before she travelled back home, she wrote a book about the habits and lifestyle of the local people based on the information she gathered. Later on in 1942, Stark was awarded a Gold Medal by the Royal Geographic Society for that book.

4 For the next 12 years, she continued her career as a traveller and writer, establishing a style which combined an account of her journeys with personal commentary on the people, places, customs, history and politics of the Middle East. Text 1	Text 2
1 Walt Disney was born on 5 December 1901, in Chicago. He developed an interest in art and took lessons at Chicago Art Institute. 2 In 1919, he moved to Kansas City where he got a series of jobs, before finding employment in his area of greatest interest the film industry. It was working for the Kansas City Film Ad company that he gained the opportunity to begin working in the relatively new field of animation. 3 Disney decided to move to Hollywood, California which was home to the growing film industry in America. He created the character Mickey Mouse. Ub Iwerks drew Mickey Mouse, and Walt gave a voice to the character. 4 The Mickey Mouse cartoons became very popular and reinforced the growing reputation of Disney Productions. The skill of Walt Disney was to give his cartoons believable real-life characteristics. They were skillfully depicted and captured the imagination of the audience. 5 In the late 1940s, Walt Disney began building up plans for a massive Theme Park. Walt Disney wished the Theme Park to be like nothing ever created on earth. In particular, he wanted it to be a magical world for children and surrounded by a train. After several years in the planning and building, Disneyland opened on July 17, 1955. 6 Walt Disney died of lung cancer in 1966. After his death, his brother Roy lead The Disney Company, but it missed the direction and genius of Walt Disney.	1 1'm Ali Hassan. I was born in 1980 and raised in Doha. My favourite hobby was drawing cartoon faces of people and animals, and my parents were always encouraging me to improve my skill through more practice and learning. 2 My art teacher guided me to attend workshops where I learnt a lot more about drawing cartoon images and became the cartoonist of the school magazine. 3] realized that children are the main audience when referring to the cartoons. A good cartoonist is one who can extract the main details of an object or a human being and simplify in shapes so that a child can recognize and be attracted to what he or she's looking at. 4 In 2002, I graduated from university and decided to have a job. At first, it was hard for me to find a job where I could practice my lifetime hobby and use the skill I'd always possessed. I worked as an editor in a local newspaper whose main task was to review articles sent by avid readers. 5 Two years later, I started to write articles myself with cartoon drawings that tell a joke or make a humorous criticism. It was a real success for me when I realized that most, if not all, the readers liked my drawings. 6 The success I made enabled me to set up my own art studio, and then I became the creator of a successful cartoon series. I made illustrations for many books written by famous authors. I also wrote cartoon strips published in different newspapers.

   - B. to give information about the life of a famous cartoonist

   - D. He worked as the chief editor of the school magazine.
