Reading

Read and answer the following questions:

Camels are really interesting animals that are famous for how well they can live in really hot and dry deserts. They have these big humps on their backs that make people call them the "ships of the desert." Even though many people think the humps carry water, they actually store fat, which is an important energy source for them. This becomes really useful when they need to travel for a long time through the sandy deserts.

People use camels a lot for carrying heavy things because they are strong and can handle tough landscapes. Besides that, camels are known for being calm and patient, which makes them great companions. In many countries, they are seen as symbols of toughness and strength, showing that they can deal with difficult situations in patience. Camels can live up to 40 years.
