Many girls feel anxious about their future careers and grades, which can lead to stress. This pressure often comes from high expectations and the desire to build a strong foundation for their adult lives.

-2 Another major challenge is the influence of social media. Teenage girls often spend a lot of time online, where they see "perfect" images of others. This can sometimes lead to a lack of self-confidence or a struggle with body image. Constant comparisons to influencers can make real life seem difficult, and it is important for young women to remember that what they see online is not always the full reality.
