THE WORLD WIDE WEBB COLLECTION

1

Mr Hardy Good job, Alex. Thanks for joining us on 'Youth Art Day'. We like to encourage young people who want to become artists.

Alex Thank you, Mr Hardy.

Leo Webb Excuse me. Did you draw this? Would you be interested in...? But let me introduce myself first. I'm Leo Webb.

Mr Hardy Leo Webb, the fashion designer?

Leo Webb Yes. I'm designing a new collection for World Wide Webb, my teenage clothing brand. None of the designs I've seen so far are as cool as this. Do you think I could use it? I can already see it printed on a T-shirt, a backpack or maybe on a pair of trainers with a sparkly touch. What do you say?

Alex Fine by me. Mr Hardy?

Mr Hardy I'm sure the director of the gallery won't have a problem.

2 A few weeks later...

Paul Which jacket should I get, the denim or the leather one? I can't make up my mind.

Mark They're both in fashion. I prefer denim jackets, but all the clothes from World Wide Webb are great anyway.

Paul Yeah, you're right. It's got really nice stuff. I also like this amazing black and green checked shirt. The design it's got on the sleeves is awesome.

Alex And the price is even more awesome...

Mark Check out these fantastic colourful backpacks.

Paul Hey, they remind me of something. Alex, isn't this the design you drew on the wall at the art gallery?

Alex What? Yeah, yeah, that's mine.

Paul So, you have seen these products with your design.

Alex Yep. Leo Webb and I did a great job.

Mark What? You met Leo Webb and never said a word? Alex!

Alex Sorry, guys. I didn't think it was a big deal at the time.

3

Look around you, Alex! You're famous!

M7 (B)

MONEY MAKE$ THE WORLD GO ROUND

(1) In ancient times, money didn't exist, so people exchanged animals or things they had, such as cows, tea, spices and stones, for other things that they needed. In ancient Rome, salt was so important that it was used to pay soldiers for their work. The Aztecs and the Mayas used beans instead of money. In the 1600s, the Russians started to use fur, which was then called 'soft gold'.

(2) During the 7th century CE, China created the first paper money in the world. Until then, the Chinese used copper coins. However, it was difficult for merchants to carry lots of coins with them when they travelled long distances. So, they started to use paper money, which was lighter. In fact, it was so light that it was soon nicknamed 'flying money'!

(3) The answer is no. For example, US currency is not made of paper. Instead, it is printed on material that consists of 75% cotton and 25% linen. That makes it hard to tear. Actually, you would have to double fold a dollar about four thousand times (first forwards and then backwards) to tear it! New banknotes can also be made of polymer, which is a thin, flexible plastic. When the new five-pound note came out in 2016, the UK government advertised it as 'strong' and 'long-lasting'. This made lots of people post online videos of themselves trying to destroy it!

(4) They usually last twenty-five to thirty years. Do you think that's not very long? Well, a note only lasts about 18 months. Do you wonder what happens to coins that are too worn out to use? They are recycled to produce new ones, of course.

(5) Absolutely. Lots of germs live on money. According to a study, 94% of money carries bacteria and viruses – and some of them can survive for up to 17 days. Fortunately, not all of these germs can make you ill – but don't forget to wash your hands after you handle money.

Minimalist family

Stay-at-home mum and blogger of The Minimalist Family, Nina Wye was shocked when she first realized how untidy her house was and how much junk she and her family had collected over the years. Without wasting any more time, she organized a decluttering weekend for the whole family. That was four years ago. Since then, her blog has helped other families find ways to reduce the amount of stuff they have and find happiness in living more simply and with less. 'Getting started is the easy part,' Nina says. 'After that, you need to avoid buying things you want but don't need.'

During that weekend, Nina, her husband Marty and their three kids gathered two carloads of stuff they didn't use, want, or even know they had. They donated to charity what they could and recycled the rest. Marty says that he enjoyed getting rid of so many things with the help of the kids, but when they came home, the house didn't look much different. 'That's when I realized that we still had work to do.'

Today each member of the Wye family owns about 100 items, including their clothes, books and toys. Pretty impressive, especially since recent studies have shown that 10-year-olds in England have around 238 toys and usually end up playing with only twelve of them. After the Wyes got rid of two-thirds of their things, the children seemed relaxed and enjoyed playing more. 'We were afraid they would miss their toys, but I think all the choices they had just made them fight more,' Nina says.

Instead of buying their children presents they'd soon get bored of, Marty and Nina now choose to spend their money on experiences. They take the kids horse riding, go to amusement parks, or even travel. In other words, they do things that they couldn't afford to do before. How are they able to do that now? Well, after years of minimalist living, the Wyes have managed to save more money. 'We hadn't realized how much money and, most importantly, how much time we used to spend on shopping for things we didn't even need,' says Nina. 'That has been the biggest gift for our family,' Nina adds. 'We spend a lot less time cleaning our home, deciding what to wear, or looking for things in piles of stuff, so we have a lot more time for doing the things we love and for each other. I'm so glad we changed our lifestyle!'

Anti-waste event ideas

22 March, 2021 at 6.17 p.m. by Hala A.

(1) I would like to express my opinion on the options that have been suggested for the school anti-waste event.

(2) First, I feel that the poster activity is great. However, it will be more successful if students work in groups instead of alone. Some people are better at drawing, others at writing or thinking of interesting ideas. A group is more likely to have all the skills necessary for making a good poster.

(3) Second, making paper sounds like fun, but this activity may not be so successful. On the one hand, it's something creative and a bit different. On the other hand, I'm worried there won't be enough equipment for everyone at the same time, and students could get bored. What's more, I think things could get really messy!

(4) In conclusion, I definitely think that the poster activity option is more suitable. I hope you take my opinion on the event into consideration when making your final decision.

The town of Norton will be evacuated as the fire that broke out in the surrounding area a few days ago continues to spread. Local authorities are doing what they can so that no roads are closed. They are also going to organize extra buses out of the town during the three-day evacuation period. They are confident that the danger will pass, and residents will return to their homes within the week.

Firefighters don't yet know what caused the fire that broke out in the nearby forest area. 'Fires are common during the summer because of the high temperatures and little rain; however, in this case, unusually strong winds helped the flames spread with surprising speed,' said chief firefighter, Mark Smith.

According to Tony Blaze, Norton's mayor, lots of firefighters from across the country were called in to help. 'We didn't have enough men to control a fire this size,' he explained. 'However, even with so many men, and helicopters that are pouring water from above, putting out the fire is very difficult. The wind keeps changing direction and carrying the flames with it. We are all making a huge effort to put out the fire as soon as possible. We hope the weather will change and bring some rain,' he said.

Much of Norton has been without electricity since yesterday, but the decision to evacuate the town was made only after serious thought. 'We don't want people to panic,' said Blaze. 'However, the fire destroyed two buildings on the outskirts of the town yesterday, and smoke from the blaze has now travelled as far as the town centre. Breathing has become difficult, and our residents' health and safety is what matters most. The evacuation will begin within twenty-four hours', said the mayor.

Blood is very important because it keeps us alive. That is why blood donors are considered lifesavers. Blood donors are people who give blood to blood banks. The blood is then available for people who have lost blood in accidents or need surgery. Hospitals and blood banks store the blood and try to keep enough in hand for major emergencies.

Donating blood is easy. Medical workers ask donors several questions about their health, as well as test their blood to make sure the blood is safe to use. Then the donors relax, often reading a magazine or talking as their blood is drawn. After donating blood, the donors usually receive some juice or milk to give them energy before leaving the donation center. The whole process is simple and quick, not scary. Most people can donate blood again in about two months if they wish.

To give blood, a person must be at least 17 years old. Students of all ages, though, can learn more about the donation process by visiting a local blood donation center. Donating blood is very important in our lives because it is one of the ways to save lives and help the community.

Olly: He isn't going to miss the flight, is he?

Tim: Well, it's impossible for him to be here in time! Our gate closes in 40 minutes and his home's at least an hour away from here.

Olly: Anyway, we have to check in now. Let's go, shall we?

A few minutes later...

Olly: Did you hear? Our flight is delayed because of a technical problem.

Tim: Oh no, I hate delays! We should give Cloudline Airlines a negative review.

Olly: No, I disagree. The delay probably means that they're checking everything so that we can have a safe flight. These things happen. After all, it may not be a long delay.

Tim: You have a point. The last time I travelled with Cloudline Airlines, everything was fine; the flight attendants were very polite and made sure that all passengers were happy during the flight.
