Language Builder

Remind them that in English we use the word/pronoun you to refer to people or somebody in general. For example, when we say: You can borrow books at the library, we don't only mean you as a person but also other people; anybody that uses the library.

Teaching Tip

Encourage students to add additional information when they answer questions with short answers. For example, in Pair Work B, when students answer Yes, I can or No, I can't, they can add another sentence. For example:

A: Can you play tennis?

B: Yes, I can. It's a great game.

Additional Activity

Play Hangman with the new words from pages 26 and 27. Draw the hangman on the board as a model. You can decide on the number of parts it should have.

Then draw blanks on the board for one of the beach activities, for example, _ _ _ _ _ (airport)

Students guess letters. If the letter is in the word, write it in the blank. If it isn't, draw one part of the hangman. When students think they know the word, they can guess. If the guess is correct the student wins. If it isn't, add another piece of the hangman and continue the game. The object is for students to guess the word before you finish the hangman.

Americans have an average of 14 vacation days each year. This number is lower than in many other countries. In France, for example, people have an average of 37 vacation days. In Saudi Arabia, people have an average of 30 vacation days each year.

COMPOUND WORDS

Language Builder

Point out that there are several compound words on the town map. In compound words, two words are put together as one word. Supermarket is a compound word. Have students find two more. (bookstore, airport)
