- The telephone was invented by Alexander Graham Bell. When Bell died on August 4, 1922, millions of phones were silent. The Bell Telephone System in the U.S. and Canada stopped service for one minute in his honor.
- Street addresses are written differently in different countries. In the U.S., the building number precedes the street name. In most of Europe and South America the street name comes first.

Language Builder

When saying three-digit addresses, we usually say the first number and then the second two numbers together. For 319, say: three-nineteen. Four-digit addresses are said two by two. For 1856, say: eighteen fifty-six.

- There are between 189 and 194 different countries in the world. It's hard to establish an exact number because it keeps changing.
- In Europe there are 230 different languages spoken, but in the small country of Papua New Guinea, there are 832.
- English is an official language in 52 countries. This is more than any other language.

Language Builder

Students may be familiar with Excuse me as an expression used to say you're sorry, for example, if you accidentally bump into someone. Explain that getting attention is also a common use of the expression. In this case, it doesn't mean "I'm sorry."
