Making Choices

Your life is a result of the choices you make. Some everyday choices are simple and usually have very little impact on your life, while others can have serious consequences on your future.

Deciding what to wear or what to eat for lunch, for example, is usually of very little consequence. If you choose not to wear a jacket on a cold day, the worst thing that can happen is that you may come down with a cold for a few days. Choosing not to study for a test, however, could have more serious consequences. If you don't study, you will probably get a low grade or fail the test. Yet, sometimes making "bad" choices like these can help you learn to make "good" ones in the future. The next time it's cold, you will consider wearing a jacket. And the next time you have a test, you will study hard so that you won't end up failing.

But life also has more important choices to make, such as deciding on a career to follow or which university to attend. Making decisions like these is often difficult, so it's important to think about them carefully. One way to do this is to make a list of the positive and negative aspects before deciding. After comparing them, the right choice may seem clear. Another thing you can do is ask someone that you trust for advice. An older member of the family or a teacher who has had more life experience will be able to guide you in the right direction.

Remember that you are responsible for making choices, whether they are "good" or "bad." If you realize that a choice you have made is wrong, then it's up to you to decide how to make it right.

11 Writing

Gerunds (pronounced jer-unds) are verbs that end in -ing but function as nouns. They keep verb-like qualities, such as using adverbs or taking objects.

Like nouns, gerunds can function in various ways in a sentence.

- Running is Omar's favorite activity. (Subject)
- Omar loves running around his block. (Direct object)
- Omar spends his free time running. (Indirect object)
- Omar even dreams about running. (Object of the preposition)
- Omar's passion is running. (Predicate noun)

Gerund phrases (phrases that begin with gerunds) can also function as nouns in a sentence. For example, in the sentence "Omar loves running around his block," the gerund phrase is running around her block.

Gerunds and gerund phrases

as subjects

- Running is Omar's favorite activity.
- Reading books entertains her.
- Brushing your cats keeps them happy and healthy.
- Reading is my favorite hobby.
- Riding a bicycle to work makes Donny happy.

as direct objects

- Omar loves running around his block
- My parents prefer eating dinner alone.
- His daughter enjoys fixing broken bicycles.
- Do they like swimming with dolphins?
- They love playing games
- I have never tried playing a guitar.

as objects of prepositions:

before, after, for, of, in, without, etc

- even dreams about running
- He wanted to learn more about riding a bike.
- Besides cooking, he spends time painting and relaxing
- Between cooking and cleaning, he doesn't have much time to relax.
- I also like to swim, next to skiing down a mountain.

the gerund is the -ing form of a verb used as a noun.

It answers the question What?

A gerund can be combined with other words to make a gerund phrase.

Two examples are watching football and making a decision

Reading books quietly is my favorite pastime.
My favorite pastime is reading books quietly

Traveling is a good way to expand your worldview.
Running is a favorite activity of mine.
Reading books quietly is my favorite pastime.

2. the object of the verb consider is a gerund phrase: wearing a jacket. Some other verbs and expressions that are followed by a gerund are:
avoid, be used to, can't stand, consider, dislike, enjoy, feel like, finish, go, hate, keep, like, love, prefer, recall, recommend, risk, spend time, start, suggest, etc

the gerund is the object of the preposition before.

Playing football is better than watching it on TV.

I prefer playing football to watching it on TV.

😊 in the first sentence playing football is the subject of the sentence, and watching it on TV is the object of the preposition than.

😊 In the second sentence, playing football is the object of the verb prefer, and watching it on TV is the object of the preposition to.

What major life changes did you do?
What were the options? Between what and what were you choosing?
How have the changes influenced your life?
Why do you think this is hard choice?

Describe a difficult choice you had to make in your life.

العالمية

GOOD
CHOICE

- what it was.
  - when you had to make it
  - how it affected your life
- and explain why this was a difficult choice to make.

After finishing my higher secondary level, I continued my study at the university level, and I had to pick a suitable subject to study. I wanted to study the course of arts, particularly the courses like history and literature. I wanted to be a poet or a songwriter. But my parents wanted to see me as a doctor who will treat patients with care. They wanted me to admit into any medical college so that I could be a doctor. I had to abide by their choice. It was truly difficult for me to move to a different track than I intended. I thought that I would study different sorts of literature and poems but instead, I must read the books over medicine and practice on dead bodies that a trainee doctor needs to do. Initially, it was difficult for me but now I am okay with all these.

الامتحان

It is hard to make decisions. Three years ago. After the death of my father. He suddenly died in a road accident and my family had to struggle a lot after his death. I find none besides my family. Everyone who promised with various supports was absent. It was really a tough time for me and my other family members. It was impossible for me to continue my academic study. So, I had to take the decision whether I should continue my education or not. I continued the education and now I do not have any financial troubles at all. I think life is not a bed of roses.

11 Making Choices

وزارة التعليم

1. Your brother isn't doing well in his history class. You are very good at history. Your brother asks you to write his history report for him. In return, he promises to do all your chores for a month. You want your brother to do well in school. If you help him, he might get a better grade in history. And if he does your chores, you will have more free time this month. However, if you write his report for him, he won't learn anything. Should you write his report? Is there another solution?
2. You are a writer for your school newspaper. You're working on an article about a local water pollution problem. You think that the pollution is from a factory that dumps chemicals into the river, but you aren't 100 percent sure. The pollution might not come from this factory. Some people are organizing a protest. Choose one situation. List some ideas for and against your choice. Write a story about how bad the situation is. What will you do?

Choose one situation. List some ideas for and against your choice.

~~I'd like to support people who help the environment.~~

~~If I march with them, I will tell them that I have to write the article about the truth.~~

~~If I see that there is pollution, I will write about that.~~

~~If I don't see pollution, I will write about that. A reporter's job is to be honest and report what is happening.~~

Now write a paragraph about your choice. Write what you will do and explain your choice.

A Difficult Decision

I am against factories that pollute the environment. But there is a question about this factory. Is it polluting the river with chemicals? I'm not 100 percent sure. I'd rather be 100 percent sure before I write an article about it. So if I'm not sure about the pollution, I won't write the article. And if I am 100 percent sure that the factory is polluting the environment, I will write about that as well as the protest march.

11 Writing

Gerunds (pronounced jer-unds) are verbs that end in -ing but function as nouns. They keep verb-like qualities, such as using adverbs or taking objects.

Like nouns, gerunds can function in various ways in a sentence.

- Running is Omar's favorite activity. (Subject)
- Omar loves running around his block. (Direct object)
- Omar spends his free time running. (Indirect object)
- Omar even dreams about running. (Object of the preposition)
- Omar's passion is running. (Predicate noun)

Gerund phrases (phrases that begin with gerunds) can also function as nouns in a sentence. For example, in the sentence "Omar loves running around his block," the gerund phrase is running around her block.

Would you rather have a desk job or an outdoor job?

Language Builder

Point out that many activities and sports, such as painting and swimming, are formed with a gerund. Elicit other examples of activities and sports that use a gerund, such as cooking, reading, horseback riding, cycling, climbing, running, jogging, etc.
