Teens and pocket money

Some parents complain that their children (1) are always asking / ask always for money. Many teens (2) get / are getting pocket money for helping with chores around the house and the amount of money they earn (3) increases / is increasing regularly. This is because things (4) are becoming / become more and more expensive all the time. Parents of teens (5) are often worrying / often worry about whether they should give their children pocket money and if they choose to do so, they (6) usually have / are usually having a hard time deciding how much to give them. It (7) seems / is seeming that there really is no 'correct' amount. One way for parents to decide how much to give their children is to ask other parents what they (8) do / are doing when it comes to pocket money. Many of them will say that they (9) provide / are providing their children with a certain amount of money each week. If their children (10) are wanting / want to buy something special, they can save this money until they have got enough or they can do extra chores around the house for a few weeks.
